Welcome to London!

You are embarking on an opportunity not only to associate with each other and to further build the global network that constitutes the ILA, but also to associate our collective expertise in leadership with a most pressing and important issue: purpose. Or, as often posed in the ILA, “Leadership for what?”

The conference theme adroitly frames this question in all of its complexity, suggesting we consider the purposes of leadership. Of course, any answer must account for the multiplicity of needs, experiences, and mindsets which animate groups, communities, and societies. Furthermore, this theme reminds us that we inhabit just one planet in which many worlds co-exist, more or less, harmoniously. Thus, answers to this fundamental question must acknowledge the multiplicity of human experiences and purposes while concomitantly speaking to our common dependency on the survival of our home planet.

This question represents a formidable challenge. But, perusing the agenda for this conference, I feel inspired to adopt an optimistic outlook of our ability to address this question and the issues embedded in it. We have gathered some of the greatest thinkers and doers in leadership to share new ideas, theories, and tools with which we may equip ourselves. And, in the vanguard, we have selected three inspiring keynote speakers who are exemplars of the ability to achieve answers through action. Stef Kranendijk is, the CEO of Desso, is leading a transformation of his company and an industry, recalibrating the impact of businesses, particularly manufacturers. Polly Higgins, an activist lawyer with expertise in earth jurisprudence, is organizing an international campaign for new laws to protect the Earth against ecocide. Keith Grint, the doyen of leadership scholars in the UK and founder of the International Conference on Studying Leadership, can be relied on to challenge and enthuse us with new ways of approaching our subject.

In addition to the provocative addresses these keynote speakers will deliver and the many valuable sessions which will follow them, ILA 2011 offers other intriguing opportunities to savor and celebrate the diversity of our leadership interests through various special events, receptions, and preconference experiences.

And what a setting in which to enjoy them! In fact, our conference location is in many ways symbolic of our gathering. Just as we begin each day by honoring the trailblazers of our field with Lifetime Legacy Awards and thereafter welcome newcomers in sessions and collegial gatherings, so too does Westminster Bridge serve as a symbolic link between a firm foundation and new, nascent ways of thinking: Houses of Parliament and other historic, iconic buildings associated with governance, business, and public leadership are entrenched on one side of the bridge, while on the other side our conference hotel is perched, overlooking the river to a new frontier.

So, on behalf of myself and the many colleagues in Europe who have contributed to this conference, especially the London Organizing Committee (Jean-Anne Stewart, Anne Murphy, Jackie Bagnall, Ted Baartmans, Caroline van Leenders, Kuldip Reyatt, Samantha Broxton, Ingrid Cox, and Lynne Thurloway) and others who are mentioned elsewhere, welcome to London!

JONATHAN GOSLING  Chair, 2011 Conference / Professor of Leadership, University of Exeter
Dear ILA Colleagues,

This has been a transformational year for the ILA. After twelve years of growth and expansion as a program housed at the University of Maryland, the ILA incorporated in March and officially became a 501(c)(3) nonprofit association in May. This historic step allows the ILA to continue to expand its international operations, partnerships, and grant-seeking activities in support of the ILA’s mission and vision. The process involved the revision of the operating documents into bylaws, creation of a newly formed Board of Directors, election of four officers, and the addition of a membership meeting at the annual conference to be held this year on Saturday from 12-12:30 in Westminster 3.

We are now embarking on the next iteration of our strategic planning process. ILA vice chair Diane Dixon is leading a Guiding Group to organize the data gathering process. Their first step was to survey current and past members. They then started interviewing colleagues and other leadership organizations around the world. The Guiding Group encourage you to add your voice to the conversation during the Strategic Planning Listening Session on Saturday at 10:45 in Plaza Suite 13. Further, you are invited to share your thoughts and ideas with Board members throughout and after the conference.

Regardless of whether you have 30 minutes or 30 hours to commit, your ideas are vital to the future of the ILA and our collective work to advance effective and ethical leadership. With your on-going participation, the ILA will continue to bring together those sharing a passionate interest in the study, development, and practice of leadership—including scholars, educators, leaders, consultants, coaches, and students—to share research, methods, and resources. Together, we can deepen our own and the public’s understanding of leadership as a process to be used for the greater good of individuals and communities worldwide.

We appreciate the efforts of all those who helped organize this wonderful gathering including the Program Committee, the hundreds of peer reviewers, the London Organizing Committee, the Member Communities, and the ILA staff. A special thanks to Josh Tarr, who recently moved on to new opportunities at the Center for Creative Leadership, for his 3 years of contributions to the success of the ILA’s conferences. If you know the perfect replacement for Josh, please contact ILA director Shelly Wilsey.

We are excited that you have chosen to spend a few days at this thirteenth conference of the ILA—and our first as ILA, Inc. We believe that this conference will provide you with immeasurable opportunities to learn, develop professionally, and network. Thank you for taking the time to participate and for your work furthering the field of leadership.

Welcome to London!

CYNTHIA CHERREY  President
GAMALIEL PERRUCCI  Chair of the Board
Mission

The International Leadership Association (ILA) is the global network for all those who practice, study, and teach leadership. The ILA promotes a deeper understanding of leadership knowledge and practices for the greater good of individuals and communities worldwide.

Our Commitment

The principal means by which our mission is accomplished is through the synergy that occurs by bringing together public and private sector leaders, scholars, educators, and consultants from many disciplines and many nations.

Our Values

INCLUSION:
Nurtures and promotes broad and diverse membership engagement.

INTENT:
Encourages leadership initiatives that advance the field of leadership and contribute to the greater global good.

INTERCONNECTION:
Builds upon the shared interests and complementary talents of members to support individual and collective goals.

INTERNATIONAL PERSPECTIVES:
Respects cultural contexts and facilitates learning and networking across national boundaries.

INTEGRITY:
Insists upon effective and ethical leadership practices and sound scholarship.

ILA Strives to:

Strengthen ties between those who study and those who practice leadership;
Serve as a forum where people can share ideas, research, and practices about leadership;
Foster effective and ethical leadership in individuals, groups, organizations, and governments in the global community;
Generate and disseminate interdisciplinary research and develop new knowledge and practices.

Strategic Plan

The ILA’s Strategic Plan guides the ILA’s growth while maintaining a high degree of flexibility to leverage emerging opportunities and the experience and talents of the ILA membership. From 2007-2011, the Strategic Plan focused on four broad initiatives:

* Advance the study and practice of leadership
* Foster interaction within and across ILA’s constituencies
* Grow and Nurture ILA Membership
* Build the ILA’s capability and capacity thru resource expansion

The ILA is now embarking on the next phase of the strategic planning process. Information is being gathered that will help ILA to understand the internal and external realities that may impact its future. We would like to hear your ideas and perspectives. Please participate in a Strategic Planning Listening Session on Saturday at 10:45 in Plaza Suite 13 and by sharing your ideas with board members throughout and after the conference.

THE BIG CONVERSATION: SHOWCASING YOUNG LEADERS
TUESDAY, 10:00-14:00
This celebratory daylong event in Manchester will operate as a Knowledge Café by bringing together youth aged 14-25 from different communities and backgrounds to highlight the ways in which young people offer genuine leadership skills in their communities. Adults with an interest in learning more about intergenerational leadership should also consider attending this event.

LEADING THE SPIRITUAL: AN EVENT AT WESTMINSTER ABBEY
WEDNESDAY, 09:00-12:00
Westminster Abbey, the final resting place for many monarchs and the setting for coronations since 1066, offers a reflective setting to examine leadership through the lens of a spiritual and values-driven perspective. This event will provide an opportunity for participants to explore wider aspects of their own self-governance and their ability to influence leadership in a broader sense towards a more inclusive, tolerant, and mutually beneficial ethos. After professional tour of the Abbey, focused on its history and significance, a presentation and discussion on the theme will encourage deeper thinking on leadership from a spiritually inclusive perspective.

NETWORK APPROACHES TO LEADERSHIP: SCALING THE IMPACT OF SOCIAL CHANGE WORK
WEDNESDAY, 09:00-13:00
World Café Europe and the Leadership Learning Community will host this exploration of how more inclusive, networked, and collective leadership approaches can unleash transformational change. The Pecha Kucha presentation format (20 images presented, each for 20 seconds) will be used to introduce research and case study results about the impact of a network strategies on non-profit leadership. This will provide the basis a participatory dialogue designed in the World Café format to explore specific steps to support leadership development approaches that foster breakthrough ideas and collective action on social purpose issues.

COMPLETING YOUR LEADERSHIP PROGRAM SELF-STUDY REVIEW UTILIZING ILA’S GUIDING QUESTIONS AND BEST PRACTICES
WEDNESDAY, 09:00-15:00
ILA’s Guiding Questions: Guidelines for Leadership Education Programs offers leadership educators a framework for program development, redesign, and evaluation. After a presentation detailing this comprehensive self-study review process, participants will have time to examine their individual (curricular or co-curricular) programs using the five Guiding Constructs. Next, representatives from several programs that have completed self-study reviews utilizing the Guiding Questions will share their experiences, and participants will complete abbreviated Guiding Questions program reviews.

LEADERS IN BRITISH HISTORY: LESSONS THROUGH THE ARTS
WEDNESDAY, 13:00–17:00
The session will begin with a brief lecture, given by ILA Member Nicola Jennings, at the National Gallery on the interpretation of leadership in British portraits, which will serve as a primer for the rest of the afternoon. Participants will then explore the National Gallery, and walk next-door to the National Portrait Gallery to take part in a tour specially designed for groups interested in leadership, led by Gallery Director Sandy Nairne, and Deputy Director Pim Baxter. The afternoon will conclude with refreshments and conversation on the rooftop restaurant of the National Portrait Gallery, which offers stunning view of London!

MULTIPLE PERSPECTIVES AND MULTIPLE METHODS IN RESEARCHING LEADERSHIP: TOWERS OF BABBLE OR FRUITFUL PLURALISM?
WEDNESDAY, 13:30–17:00
An ever-widening range of theoretical perspectives and research methods are used in researching the phenomenon of leadership. Does leadership research risk fragmentation into Towers of Babble across competing perspectives and interpretations or is there scope to weave a more fruitful pluralism from mixed methods approaches? Chaired by David Beech, University of Sussex, this seminar is designed to share knowledge about mixed methods and critical reflexivity. Four acclaimed leadership researchers Mats Alvesson, Lund University; Steve Kempster, University of Birmingham; Alan Bryman, University of Leicester; and Kevin Kowe, University of North Carolina-Greensboro, will offer experiences and advice, and participants will join a facilitated conversation.
SPECIAL EVENTS

ILA CONFERENCE COLLEAGUES
THURSDAY, 7:30-8:30, WESTMINSTER 3
Conference Colleagues is an opportunity for conference attendees to meet others who share common interests. Both first-time and long-time attendees are encouraged to participate. Participants will meet on the first morning of the conference to be introduced to a small group of colleagues with shared interests. This is the only structured part of the program.

5TH ANNUAL STUDENT CASE COMPETITION POSTER SHOWCASE
THURSDAY, 8:00-9:00, WESTMINSTER FINAL PRESENTATIONS
FRIDAY, 18:00-19:30 PLAZA SUITES 1-3
The Case Competition enables undergraduate and graduate student teams to further their development in the leadership field through a two-round competition. The students represent their universities, engage with conference participants to develop a case analysis, and compete for the sought-after title of “ILA Case Competition Winner,” complimentary 1-year ILA memberships, and a $1,000 prize.

LEADERSHIP EDUCATION PROGRAM DIRECTORS, DEANS, AND CHAIRS LUNCHEON
THURSDAY, 12:00-13:15, WESTMINSTER 3
The PDDC Community provides a forum for networking and information sharing among this segment of the ILA membership. The annual conference luncheon will be an opportunity to exchange experiences, opportunities, and challenges specific to Leadership Education Program Directors, Deans, and Chairs. Tickets are required for this event.

3RD ANNUAL EMERGING SCHOLARS RESEARCH CONSORTIUM
THURSDAY, 16:45-18:00, PLAZA SUITE 3
The Consortium creates a valuable opportunity to engage in meaningful dialogue about the latest scholarship and research being conducted by new contributors to the field of leadership studies. The consortium serves as a venue for junior and senior leadership scholars to interact, foster collaboration, meet potential co-authors, and continue to enrich the field. In addition, universities may identify potential faculty and publishers may recruit future authors.

KEYNOTE LISTENER’S EVENT (NEW THIS YEAR!)
THURSDAY, 18:15-20:15, WESTMINSTER 1
The energy and conversations surrounding the conference theme will be captured via a host of social media and collated into a series of short clips which will be presented by the Chair of the event. Brad Jackson, in a fast-paced, concise and interactive manner. The Keynote ‘Listeners’ will respond sharing their insights and expertise. The event is free and open to all conference participants but space is limited so pre-registration is recommended.

YOUNG LEADERS NETWORKING DINNER
THURSDAY, 18:15–20:15, LONDON HOUSE AT GOODENOUGH COLLEGE
The Young Leaders Group works to ensure connection between the leaders of today and the leaders of tomorrow. Keynote speaker Tim “Mac” Macartney, founder of Embercombe, will give his thoughts on authentic leadership and the world of the future. This otherwise informal style networking dinner offers a great opportunity to connect with fellow ILA members, young and old, share ideas, and talk about the needs of the world of tomorrow.

2ND ANNUAL WOMEN AND LEADERSHIP NETWORKING LUNCHEON
FRIDAY, 12:00-13:15, WESTMINSTER 3
Organized by ILA’s Women and Leadership Affinity Group (WLAG), the purpose this event is to provide information, resources, and networking opportunities for those men and women interested in the topic of women and leadership. In particular, the organizers welcome scholars and practitioners who have conducted research and work related to women in leadership or who are interested in discussing possibilities for future collaboration around this topic. Tickets are required for this event.

LEADERSHIP AUTHOR BOOK SIGNING RECEPTION
FRIDAY, 16:30-18:00 WESTMINSTER 3
A perennial favorite, this reception provides an opportunity for conference participants to personally meet, talk with, and have books signed by leadership authors attending the conference. Many of their books are available for purchase at the Leadership Book Fair and refreshments will be provided.
initiated in 2008, the Leadership Legacy program honors individuals who have made a significant contribution to the field of leadership throughout the course of their careers. Each recipient of ILA’s Lifetime Achievement Award is recognized and paid tribute to at our global conference as well as after the conference via a virtual Legacy Wall. The ILA thanks Larraine Matusak for her leadership in creating this project and for her founding sponsorship. We also wish to thank the Randall L. Tobias Center for Leadership Excellence at Indiana University for conducting oral histories with our recipients.

John Adair

One of the world’s leading authorities on leadership and leadership development. Adair has published more than 48 books on leadership and organizational effectiveness and held the U.K.’s first Chair of Leadership Studies from 1979. More than a million people around the world have taken leadership development courses based on his concept of Action-Centered Leadership.

See page 29 for more information

Mary Parker Follett

An extraordinary thinker and synthesizer of ideas. With a prescient approach to leadership, management, and human relations, 115 years after the publication of her first book, a wide variety of disciplinary lines of inquiry and organizational traditions look to her as a foundational figure. Her ideas, radical at the time, are now widely lauded and accepted.

See page 16 for more information

John Gardner

Gardner’s life epitomized the balance between reflection and action required by the complex, wicked problems society faces. The sole Republican to serve in President Johnson’s cabinet, as Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare he launched Medicare and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting. Founder of Common Cause and Independent Sector, he won the Presidential Medal of Freedom in 1964.

See page 17 for more information

Robert House

As the principal investigator, and founder in the early 1990s, of the Global Leadership and Organizational Behavior Effectiveness Research Program (GLOBE), House is one of the foremost experts on leadership across cultures. He is best known for his development of the Path-Goal Theory of Leader Effectiveness and a theory of Charismatic Leadership.

See page 55 for more information
Mary Parker Follett (1868-1933) was an extraordinary thinker and synthesizer of ideas. With her prescient approach to leadership, management, and human relations, “she delighted in challenging distinguished academics to stretch beyond disciplinary boundaries.” 1 One of the first women to ever be invited to speak at the London School of Economics, she also consulted with the League of Nations and the International Labor Organization. And, while the years between the height of her productivity and the present did not always provide fertile ground for her ideas, today, 115 years after the publication of her first book, a wide variety of disciplinary lines of inquiry and organizational traditions look to her as a foundational figure. As Warren Bennis points out, “Just about everything written today about leadership and organizations comes from Mary Parker Follett’s writings and lectures.” 2

Follett graduated summa cum laude from Radcliffe in 1898 and published her first book, The Speaker of the House of Representatives, based on research she had conducted as a student. While several of her contemporaries “chastised her—an inexperienced woman—for daring to speak on contemporary political matters,” the book was favorably received by many as a brilliant and insightful analysis. 3

Follett’s strong desire to “make something of herself” led to her post-graduate work in the Roxbury neighborhood of Boston.4 Her passion for the development of citizenship and community organizing matured during her time with immigrant and working class communities and was articulated in her second book, The New State. The book, which brings together her personal experiences and her “academic acumen as a student of democratic theory,” has since been recognized as “an American classic of participatory democracy.” 5 The appendix to the book is also credited with being one of the earliest pieces of scholarly writing in the U.S. on the importance and value of adult and continuing education. 6

Beginning in the 1920s, Follett turned her mind to management and leadership. Her last book, Creative Experience, was the result of this focus and, in many ways, applied the ideas she had developed with respect to communities to organizations. Creative Experience is also where she expressed her, radical at the time, circular theory of power, a theory which emphasizes win-win solutions in the approach to conflict resolution and the importance of getting people to cooperate.

JOHN W. GARDNER (1912-2002) has been described as a “quintessential American hero,” 1 “a beloved public figure,” 2 and “an eloquent voice for citizen participation.” 3

Gardner’s life epitomized the balance between reflection and action required by the complex, wicked problems society faces. His reflective practices extended to examinations of his own life and action based on the self-knowledge he gleaned. He returned to college a year and a half after dropping out to attempt his hand at novel writing having realized he did not know enough about people to be an excellent writer—a realization that impacted his choice of academic study, psychology, at Stanford and UC-Berkeley, where he received his PhD. He turned down Bobby Kennedy’s vacant senate seat and calls for a presidential run, believing that he was too old for politics and that what the country needed was more citizen involvement and accountability—a turn that lead to his foundation of Common Cause and, later, Independent Sector. And, after speaking on the topic of leadership for several years from the perspective of an observer and practitioner, he devoted five years of study to the topic and published the classic On Leadership after returning to Stanford as the Haas Centennial Professor of Public Service.

In addition to the inspiration many find from his books, (Excellence, Self-Renewal, On Leadership, etc.), not a day goes by that lives are not in some ways touched by his legacy. As President of the Carnegie Corporation, he proposed the White House Fellows program and, earlier in his career there, helped start the Model United Nations. As the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare under President Johnson, he was an integral part of Johnson’s “Great Society,” leading the agency in its launch of Medicare, the creation of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, and a substantial investment in secondary education—feats even more notable when you consider that he was the sole Republican in Johnson’s cabinet. He is even credited with coining the phrase, “the pursuit of excellence.”

An eternal optimist, throughout his life he remained devoted to the “American Experiment.” The recipient of numerous awards, he was presented with the Presidential Medal of Freedom in 1964, the highest civilian honor given in the U.S.

MEMBER INTEREST GROUPS

Member Interest Groups (MIGs) are organized broadly around field or orientation to leadership. They facilitate learning and networking among their members and provide opportunities to actively participate in the ILA. Furthermore, MIGs: promote the interests of their members; advise the staff, board, and conference program team; recruit colleagues to submit session proposals; and organize the peer review process to select sessions for each conference.

As a benefit of ILA membership, you may formally affiliate with up to three Member Interest Groups. MIG members are eligible to participate in the conference proposal review, vote in the annual election, join MIG committees and work teams, and receive updates from the MIG chair. We encourage you to speak with the current MIG Chair and Chair-Elects regarding elections for the position of MIG Chair-Elect (who will serve as the 2013 MIG Chair), as well as other volunteer opportunities.

Each MIG will have an information table at the reception on Friday. The MIG business meetings will be held each morning (please consult the program agenda for specific times and locations). Everyone is welcome to come learn about the many ways that you can participate and increase your involvement in the ILA.

ILA MEMBER COMMUNITIES

The principal means by which ILA’s mission is accomplished is through the synergy that occurs by bringing together people from many different nations, cultures, sectors, industries, etc. You can achieve this synergy by participating in Member Communities that match your particular orientation to leadership or that focus on a particular theme, question, or interest area. There are three types of Member Communities: Member Interest Groups, Learning Communities, and Affinity Groups.
LEARNING COMMUNITIES

Learning communities are organized by members around specific questions, themes, or areas of passion. Learning community affiliation ensures you receive communication relevant to that community and affords you the opportunity to participate in conversations (face-to-face or virtual), online discussions (via ILASpace, ILA’s online community), or contribute to wikis or other forums.

Ethics Forum Learning Community
There are many ways to approach ethical leadership: research, practice, frameworks and theories, development, education, or cultural and organizational context. This community is an ongoing practical forum for discussions about and explorations of ethics and leadership.

CONTACT: Jan Byars
jan@innovativeleadershipsolution.com

Followership Learning Community
A community of those interested in research, scholarship, teaching, and practices related to followership that helps members form collaborations for specific projects. An active wiki promotes and distributes the latest research, scholarship, and information.

CONTACT: Ira Chaleff
ibtecca@cs.com
Elisabeth Null

Philosophy, Religion, and Worldviews Learning Community
The purpose of this newest LC is to promote a healthy understanding of the nexuses between philosophy, religion, worldviews, and leadership consistent with the ILA’s mission statement.

CONTACT: ILAWorldViews@ila-net.org

AFFINITY GROUPS

Affinity Groups help members find others with mutual interests for a more sustained conversation and deeper networking.

Leadership Education Program Directors, Chairs, and Deans Affinity Group
Serves the specific needs of Leadership Education Program Directors, Chairs, and Deans by providing a forum for networking and information sharing among this segment of the ILA membership.

CHAIR: Sandra Peart speart@richmond.edu

Young Leaders Affinity Group
This group aims to connects student members with one another, increase student involvement in the association, submit fresh ideas, and infuse the unique brand of energy that only a group of student members can generate.

CHAIR: Yori Kamphuis yori@yori.info

Women and Leadership Affinity Group
A network of leadership scholars and practitioners who want to enhance their knowledge, expertise, and research in the area of women and leadership and to advance the standing of women in leadership.

CHAIR: Susan Madsen madsensu@uvu.edu

ILA 2011 Global Conference
Proposal Review Process

The concurrent sessions were selected from amongst 550 submissions through a three-phase, rigorous review process. Over the course of a two-month period, each proposal was reviewed by at least five and as many as sixteen individuals. Each of the five Member Interest Groups coordinated a Presentation Track; a theme Presentation Track, coordinated by members of the London local planning team, was added this year.

This process included three phases:

PHASE 1 DOUBLE BLIND PEER REVIEW
In February, over 350 ILA members responded to a call for reviewers. Each volunteered for one of the six presentation tracks and provided detailed information about their expertise. This information was used to match three to four reviewers to each submission. Reviewers were not assigned their own or a colleague’s submission, and they could not see presenter names and affiliations. The scoring rubric published on the ILA submission website was used to assess the quality and usefulness of each submission. Papers submitted to the Leadership Scholarship Refereed Paper Track were evaluated upon an additional scoring rubric.

PHASE 2 PRESENTATION TRACK TEAM EVALUATION
The chairs for each track confirmed all Phase 1 scoring to ensure nothing was overlooked. The Program Committee convened for three days in April to read those proposals that received above average scores. The presentation track teams, listed below, discussed and evaluated hundreds of proposals in order to create a high quality program to serve the diverse needs of the ILA community.

PHASE 3 ILA PROGRAM TEAM
The Program Team confirmed that all requirements and guidelines were met. In May, the ILA office issued email notifications of acceptance or non-acceptance to all individuals who submitted proposals to the conference. Over the summer, the team assigned time slots and worked with presenters to ensure the accuracy of the program book descriptions and session formats.

WINNER OF THE
2010 UNIVERSITY OF SAN DIEGO’S
OUTSTANDING BOOK ON LEADERSHIP AWARD

“This book is surprisingly coherent for an edited book, thanks to the work of the two editors who do a good job of connecting seemingly diverse perspectives on leadership....The book, in essence, articulates a research agenda for a field that often has relied on armchair theorizing rather than systematic inquiry and analysis.” Excerpt from the Selection Committee’s letter announcing the award.

Stef Kranendijk

STEF KRANENDIJK is CEO of Desso, a Netherlands-based manufacturer of carpets for home and commercial use and artificial grass for sports. Desso is the first carpet manufacturer in the Environmental Protection Encouragement Agency to adopt a Cradle-to-Cradle approach to its products. Kranendijk’s leadership of Desso over the last four years, and his enthusiastic adoption of a Cradle-to-Cradle approach exemplifies the theme of this year’s conference, One Planet, Many Worlds: Remapping the Purposes of Leadership. His experiences at Desso speak to one of the central questions of the conference, “How are business leaders responding to the challenges of ‘one planet’ living?”

The Cradle to Cradle design concept was introduced ten years ago by William McDonough and Michael Braungart in their book: Cradle-to-Cradle: Remaking the Way We Make Things. This revolutionary post-industrial model encourages manufacturers (and regions) to adopt ecologically intelligent design approaches that go beyond sustainability to instead actually enrich the earth. Kranendijk will describe Desso’s innovative efforts to create profitable and ethical manufacturing processes and corporate practices.

In addition to inspiring creative and cost-effective solutions within his own company, Kranendijk addresses audiences around the world to encourage rejection of planned obsolescence in favor of industrial development focused on eco-efficiency and full-circle processes.

Kranendijk began his tenure at Desso in April 2007 after many years of experience in investing and running a variety of companies. He is also co-owner and partner of Sares Invest BV (since 2004), a growing asset management firm, and has served on the board of several companies including Sterling Strategic Value Ltd. a reputed investment firm taking positions in public companies. He served in senior leadership positions at Procter & Gamble for 19 years, including: regional Vice President P&G Central & Eastern Europe (1997-1998); Vice President & General Manager P&G Germany (1994-1997); and General Manager P&G Netherlands (1991-1994). Prior to his independent entrepreneurship, Kranendijk was President- Europe, Middle East & Africa of Stanley Works, a U.S. based S&P 500 company (1998-2000), Vice President and General Manager—Laundry, Cleaning and Paper Products in Germany; General Manager, the Netherlands; and Marketing Director, Turkey. He also held marketing, brand management, and strategic planning assignments in Italy, the U.K. and the Netherlands.

He holds a B.S. in Economics from the University of Groningen, Netherlands, and a Doctorandus Business Administration from Erasmus University, Rotterdam.
JOHN ADAIR is one of the world’s leading authorities on leadership and leadership development.

A prolific writer, Adair has published more than 48 books on leadership and organizational effectiveness, including several books on military history. His books are frequently among the most popular leadership titles on Amazon and several, like Great Leaders (1989) and Effective Strategic Leadership (2002), are considered classics in the field. His most recent publications include the series John Adair’s 100 Greatest Ideas for... (2011) and The Leadership of Muhammad (2010).

Adair is extremely adept at crossing the boundaries between scholarship and practice. While his books are written for leaders, as opposed to leadership scholars, they are based on careful analysis and, as Jonathan Gosling writes, repeatedly demonstrate “a keen appreciation for the systemic complexity of the contexts in which an individual struggles to fulfill a leadership role.” 1 Adair himself believes that the future of Leadership Studies lies in the development of scholar-practitioners, "[Y]ou cannot do Leadership Studies... if you are interested only in theory and not at all in practice. It would be like trying to study pharmacology... but leaving out any knowledge to whether or not the drugs worked...” 2

Adair’s contribution to the field of leadership studies is immeasurable, extending far beyond his writing. In addition to holding the U.K.’s first Chair of Leadership Studies from 1979 at the University of Surrey, more than a million people around the world have taken leadership development courses based on his concept of Action-Centered Leadership, which he developed in the 1960s and 70s while lecturing at Sandhurst. Adair is also credited with having helped change the perception that leadership and management are one and the same. He was also among the first to demonstrate that leadership can be developed; it is not exclusively the domain of inborn traits.

A successful public speaker and consultant to both the public and private sectors—most famously he introduced a leadership development strategy that turned around Imperial Chemical Industries, making them the most profitable company in Britain—he is frequently mentioned in lists of the top thinkers, worldwide, on management.

Adair is currently the Chair of Strategic Leadership at the United Nations Staff College in Turin, and also Honorary Professor of Leadership at the China Executive Leadership Academy in Shanghai.

Hints about Choosing Sessions

Many participants tell us that the number of concurrent session choices can be a bit overwhelming! This guide is meant to draw attention to several helpful pieces of information—beyond the session’s title and description—to help you understand more about each session’s focus, approach, and target audience.

Please feel free to stretch yourself by attending sessions outside of your normal comfort zone. Of course, all sessions are open to all interested parties; however, if the room is full, please attend another session as overcrowded rooms pose a safety hazard.

One indicator of the session’s focus and target audience is the track. Each submission was reviewed and accepted by one or more presentation tracks. These include: Conference Theme, Leadership Scholarship, Public Leadership, Leadership Education, Leadership Development, and Business Leadership. (See pages [tba – mig pages] for additional information.)

If you are interested in attending a session by a particular person, please refer to the presenter index at the end of this program book.

In addition to the concurrent session types listed in the next column, two formats include:

INTERACTIVE ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSION
A brief presentation followed by a facilitated small group discussion at roundtables in the ballroom on Thursday between 16:45-18:00. A bell will ring at the midpoint so participants may move to a second table.

POSTER
A visual display of a program, paper, or project. Please refer to the poster descriptions on pages [ ] and stop by to talk with the poster presenter during the reception on Friday between 16:30-17:30.

Concurrent sessions are also differentiated by their session type:

WORKSHOP
An interactive demonstration or set of exercises rooted in audience participation and active learning focused on the development of leadership skills and proficiencies.

PRESENTATION
Research, practices, topics, or programs usually presented in a more traditional lecture format.

PAPER
A formal, traditionally-academic presentation that documents research, presents theories, or argues a particular point of view. Papers accepted as a Refereed were subject to a more stringent review process.

PANEL
Presentations and/or discussions by two or more people with differing perspectives and viewpoints; generally time is reserved for discussion.

CASE STUDY
The presentation of detailed information about a leadership program or challenge—particularly those that may serve as models for others.
How Leaders Build and Maintain Trust: Implications for Practitioners, Educators, and Researchers

Plaza Suite 1  Session Type: Panel  Track: Development

Trust is an essential element of leadership success. This panel will explore how leaders build and maintain trust. Implications will be explored from the perspective of practitioners, leadership educators, and researchers to provide a comprehensive overview and models of how leaders can enhance trust levels.

Perspectives on Leader Trust

This presentation will provide an overview of models by Reina and Reina and Shockley-Zalabak, Morreale, and Hackman for building and maintaining trust as a leader and enhancing follower and overall organizational trust.

Michael Hackman  Department of Communication, University of Colorado-Colorado Springs

Everything Leaders Want to Know About Building Trust but are Afraid to Ask

A solid and sustainable relationship between people is built on trust. The best leaders know how to build a relationship on trust. The presenter will share nine steps shown to create and sustain trust in relationships.

Ted Baartmans  Presentation Group

Understanding Leader Trust in the Global Context

This presentation will explore how leader trust is built and maintained across cultures with an emphasis on exploring tactics that can be used to incorporate the concept of leader trust in the global classroom.

Jane Hackman  University of San Francisco

Trust and Leader Ethics

The presenter will report the initial findings of a research study examining the relationship between ethical leadership and organizational trust. This project was the first to use the Ethical Leadership Scale to evaluate top-level managers as well as direct supervisors and to examine the relationship between ethical leader behavior and collective perceptions of trust. Implications for the study and practice of leadership will be discussed.

Leadership for Inclusion Within and Across Countries

Certainly, the idea of One Planet, Many Worlds argues for the inclusion of all nations in global entities such as the Olympics or the United Nations. At the same time, many nations have autocratic or exclusionary governmental systems. In this session, scholars will share two contrasting papers that consider both how to foster democratic processes that can include all of a society’s groups in policymaking, as well as how to include a wide range of countries in the community of nations.

Leadership and the Design of Civic Engagement Processes: A Literature Review and Set of Propositions

Elected and appointed officials who seek to lead effectively and foster democratic action in today’s shared-power world must be able to design processes to reveal and accomplish group goals. This paper synthesizes several literatures, and proposes a framework illustrated via selected case studies of successful and unsuccessful civic engagement. The authors will discuss their thesis that public officials should think wisely and strategically about engagement processes so that engagement is more likely to create public value and advance the common good.

Mega Events: Opportunities for Strategic Global Leadership or Vehicles of Domestic Political Legitimacy?

Leaders of global sporting bodies are awarding major sporting events on an agenda of inclusion, social and economic development, and emotion. Drawing on research in international and national events policy within a range of governance arrangements, the paper asserts that major events are now a public policy tool. The presenters will assert that as event owners consider awarding events more widely, sporting and cultural events need to be re-evaluated as a force for good—whereby event owners can now contribute positively to a growing global consciousness.

Leadership and Leadership Development: The Global Body of Knowledge (Lifetime Legacy Session)

The discovery of the generic role of leader made possible the pulling together of the world’s different traditions concerning leadership and leadership development into a body of knowledge. It was the application of the generic role of leader to the practical business of leadership selection and training over more than fifty years that finally turned it from being a particular general theory into a piece of universal truth. How can we now apply that knowledge to help meet the world’s growing demand for better leaders in all fields and at all levels of leadership responsibility, including leadership in government? John Adair, the United Nations Chair of Strategic Leadership and an ILA Lifetime Achievement Award winner, will first introduce and outline the global body of knowledge for about twenty minutes, and then respond to questions. He will conclude with a summary at the end the session.

Leading the Transition from the Comfort Zone of Traditional Education to the Risky Zone of Technology Enhanced Learning

Plaza Suite 12  Session Type: Panel  Track: Education

The members of the panel have diverse backgrounds, but share extensive practical and scholarly experience in the field of technology and education. The panelists will discuss the merits and challenges of teaching and learning with technology, with a specific focus on the use of videoconferencing, social networks, and learning management systems in blended collaborative learning environments for leadership education.

Effectively Working and Collaborating Across the Globe

Plaza Suite 13  Session Type: Workshop  Track: Development

Globalization has brought interdependence and collaboration to the forefront as our colleagues, clients, and suppliers are multicultural and increasingly geo-dispersed. This interactive workshop will provide an opportunity for participants to practice a model using a real-life case between global leaders in the U.S. and Turkey as they related to challenges experienced by global directors of a school in rural Kenya.

One Planet, Many Worlds: The Power of Leadership Artistry

Plaza Suite 2  Session Type: Workshop  Track: Development, Conference Theme

The focus of this year's Fetzer Dialogues will be on leadership practices that support an awareness of planet Earth. Inviting and integrating the contributions of many voices and perspectives, each dialogue will explore leadership experiences and questions that touch the world of artistry and, through the creative process, bridge many cultures and countless perspectives. The inquiry will explore how to foster necessary collaboration across old divides to solve seemingly impossible challenges. All three dialogues will follow a similar format: 1) comments and observations by the presenters, 2) reflections and conversation among small groups of participants about their knowledge/experience/reflections on the theme, 3) full room dialogue.

Dialogue #1: Leadership and the Power of Imagery

This first interactive dialogue will explore the role of imagery in the work of leadership. The capacity of people to remain centered and steady in the midst of uncertainty, surprise, and new possibilities often rides on the power of the images that they carry about the circumstances in which they find themselves. Often imagery that speaks powerfully to a leader can help draw out the insights of others, foster connection across dimensions of difference, encourage hope for the future, and catalyze action for positive change.

Do We Need to Remap the Ways We Teach Leadership Theory to Undergraduates?

* Plaza Suite 3  * Session Type: Panel  * Track: Education
Do our undergraduate students know the difference between a leadership theory and a leadership model? Can they identify how the theories covered have been evaluated? As educators, how do we decide what should be covered in courses on leadership theory and practice? The presenters will summarize many current popular theories and models, explain the empirical foundation behind each of them, and invite participants to join in a discussion about classroom experiences.

Leadership in Emerging Political Movements Around the World

* Plaza Suite 6  * Session Type: Panel  * Track: Conference Theme
The end of the first and the beginning of the second decade of the new millennium brought new issues in public leadership. They are connected with the rise of new emerging movements, coalitions, and alignments such as Tea Party Movement in the U.S., the new coalition of the Liberal Democrats and the Conservatives in the U.K., the Public Affairs Party in the Czech Republic, the Progressive Party Realignment Movement in South Korea, and emergent movements in Arab countries. Who are the leaders and followers of these movements and coalitions? How effective are the leaders in communicating their values? How do they communicate with and attract their followers? What is the impact of new forms of media? How did these movements become influential so soon? Panelists will address these questions using examples from their respective countries.

Self Mechanisms in the Development of Leadership: The Role of Developmental Readiness, Self-Efficacy, and Leader Identity

* Plaza Suite 4  * Session Type: Papers  * Track: Scholarship
Developmental Readiness: Its Moderating Role in Leadership Development, and a Look at its Precursors
This empirical study builds on the concept of developmental readiness recently introduced in the literature. It is conceptualized somewhat differently than originally introduced by other researchers, encompassing self-awareness, self-regulation, and self-motivation. Its role in the developmental process will be discussed as well as a look at personal values and roles as precursors.

* Mariam Shebaya  Aston University

Inspirational or Self-deflating: The Role of Status and Self-efficacy in Leadership Role Model Effectiveness
The panelist will present three studies in a line of research that merges both intrapersonal and interpersonal perspectives to individual success by examining the role of social comparison processes and self-efficacy in moderating responses to role models. The studies suggest a potential dark side of elite female leaders as role models and identify the importance of self-efficacy in determining responses to leadership role models.

Identity and Perceived Leadership in Virtual Groups
This paper details a study designed to determine the relationship between physical identity and perceptions of leader emergence within the context of virtual environments. The primary research question follows: What effects do the physical characteristics of an individual have on other people’s perceptions of that individual as an emerging leader? Implications for organizations using virtual contexts to operate globally will be discussed.

Emotional Intelligence Compatibility and Leader-Member Exchange

Drawing upon role theory, social exchange theory, and the attraction paradigm, researchers hypothesized that the compatibility of emotional intelligence between supervisors and subordinates predicts the quality of leader-member exchange (LMX). This study collected and analyzed data from 135 employees and their supervisors working in business organizations located in northern Malaysia. The presenter will discuss implications of the findings for those in managerial roles and suggest directions for future research.

Avoiding the Perception and Reality of Powerlessness Between Followers and Leaders at Distant Points of the Hierarchy

In large government agencies and multinational corporations programs are sent down to followers from four or more levels up the hierarchy. Often it is unrealistic for those many levels down the hierarchy to form close relationships with senior formal leaders. Drawing on material from the 3rd edition of The Courageous Follower: Standing Up To and For Our Leaders, the presenter will discuss implications of this increased distance, and share strategies that followers have used to influence leaders stationed far up the hierarchy, as well as strategies used by leaders to support the flow of information up from the front lines.

Teaching Student Leaders and Leadership Studies Students

Plaza Suite 12  Session Type: Panel  Track: Education

What types of literature, experiences, and student growth can or should be a part of diverse approaches to teaching leadership? This panel will present three basic approaches to teaching student leaders and students in leadership studies programs: through the liberal arts, through student life, and through business/professional programs. Presentations will be structured around ILA’s Guiding Questions for Leadership Programs and will highlight the way these three programs have sought to use these guiding questions.

Tips for Clever Leaders: Exploring the Conference Theme Together

Plaza Suite 13  Session Type: Workshop  Track: Conference Theme

This interactive workshop provides participants with an opportunity to consider the conference theme as it relates to their own experience of taking leadership for sustainability. Those working on change know that success almost always requires system innovations and collaboration across sectors. Building on concepts from quantum sociology and transition management, the booklet Ten Tips for Clever Change was developed for those leading sustainable transitions. After a snappy 15 minute presentation, participants will join small groups and discuss their change management dilemmas. The session will conclude with an energetic large group exploration of solutions to the most interesting challenges.

Leadership for Creativity and Innovation

Plaza Suite 3  Session Type: Panel  Track: Scholarship

This session brings together two scholars who have been examining issues of leadership for innovation with respect to team/collective creativity processes. Leadership for creativity and innovation will be addressed from two lenses: team creative processes and complexity leadership theory. Although these approaches adopt different ontological and epistemological assumptions, their findings are surprisingly complementary. Therefore, after initial presentations describing the research programs and findings, discussion will focus on how they can inform one another, with specific attention to areas of overlap and potential differences in findings. Moreover, emphasis will be given to implications for practice, and pressing areas for future research.

Remapping Latin American Leadership: One Region with a World of Transformative Opportunities

Plaza Suite 2  *Session Type: Panel  *Track: Development

Three researchers/practitioners from Latin America will examine culturally wrapped challenges to leadership development from across this diverse and emergent region. Built upon three years of ILA conversations about leadership in Latin America and decades of hands-on experience from the field, this panel will offer insights for, and facilitate a discussion about, culturally relevant leadership development practices aimed at creating transformative organizational spaces, developing capacities, and redefining leadership.

Identifying and Overcoming Challenges Facing Latin American Leaders

The ILA 2010 roundtable discussion outcomes, combined with research of 95 Latin American executives in the private sector, indicate the presence of complex challenges. This presentation will examine themes, patterns, and differences across Latin America and highlight effective practices used in a multi-year leadership development program to address these challenges.

Conscious Capitalism: Leaders and Businesses with a Worldview

Plaza Suite 10  *Session Type: Presentation  *Track: Business

Conscious capitalism is an emerging philosophy based on the belief that businesses can enhance corporate performance while simultaneously improving the quality of life of all stakeholders. This session will explore the two elements that ultimately create conscious capitalism – conscious leadership and conscious business. Findings from a recent study connecting leaders’ development to ethical and conscious leaders will be explored. In addition, stories will be presented of CEOs who are concerned for the capitalist system as a whole and the society in which they operate.

Leadership in a Recession: A Review of Lessons Learned from FinancialTimes.com

The aim of this paper is to contribute to the understanding of leadership in a financial context through a meta-review of the leadership issues discussed between 2008 and 2010 in the Financial Times, a key financial publication. The presentation will summarize leadership issues by subject, type, and date of entry; describe what was reported about financial leadership at the strategic, operational, and tactical levels; and, suggest future directions for the leadership debate and associated research.

Metaphors of Failure: A Critical Study of Metaphors in Bankers' Explanations of the Economic Crisis

This research examines explanations by banking CEOs for the economic crisis, given during testimony to MPs in London in February 2009. Utilizing a critical and interpretive approach, the paper suggests that their main intent seems to be to frame public discussion of the crisis in terms that minimize their personal responsibility, and argues that the success of the bankers in framing public debate was limited, while the metaphors they employed have the potential to minimize learning from failure.

Pericles' Transformative Ambition: Democratic Imperialism and the Peloponnesian War (Fredric M. Jablin Doctoral Dissertation Award Winner)

* Plaza Suite 7  * Session Type: Paper  * Track: Scholarship

This paper argues that Pericles' of Athens statesmanship is an example of a rarer kind of ambition and statecraft that is not reducible to prevailing realist and constructivist theories in international relations, which abstract too much from the experience of leaders. It defines Pericles' ambition as transformative, which was expressed in his desire to achieve Athenian glory. His goals were visionary and their implementation required deft statecraft at the domestic and international level. Pericles' influence was unmatched in Athens. As a rare and gifted politician, he channeled his ambition beyond office-seeking. Although he maintained popular appeal by satisfying public demands and expectations, Pericles effectively modified public opinion and the city-state's political understanding. He made the Athenians agree to policies that did violence against their ingrained political habits. Contrary to extant theories of foreign policy, Pericles shaped and changed citizens' preferences, rather than mechanically respond to them.

Global Contextual Challenges and Public Leadership Implications: A Perspective from South Africa and the Netherlands

* Plaza Suite 9  * Session Type: Panel  * Track: Public

There are a number of serious and powerful global trends—such as inequality, scarcity, sustainability, access, and citizen expectations—that challenge public leaders globally, nationally, and locally. These trends impact several and jointly in systems to create complex or wicked challenges for which there are no easy leadership answers, and where solutions all too often create new, unanticipated problems. New Research on Ethics: The Roles of Logic, Intuition, Care, and Character

How Leaders Make Ethical Decisions: Logic or Intuition?
New developments in psychology and brain research cast doubt on traditional cognitive models of ethical decision-making. Instead of reasoning their way to ethical conclusions, leaders and other decision makers may make immediate judgments based on intuition and then employ logic to justify their choices. This paper summarizes these alternative approaches to moral decision-making and describes their implications for leaders as well as for instructors, student life professionals, trainers and others engaged in ethical leadership development.

Character vs. Situational Imperatives as the Driver of Unethical Conduct
Anyone who has attempted to lead an organization from an authoritative position has been confronted with the bewildering problem of the noncompliant and the unethical. This paper suggests that there are two great and rarely intersecting intellectual currents on the topic of the causes of ethical transgression. The centrality of ethics to the study of leadership, implications for the practice of leadership, and recommendations to bridge the divergent perspectives will be discussed.

Undoing Identities: The Tension Between Care and Criticality in Leadership Development
This paper offers a novel conceptualisation, un-doing, of how identity work is experienced in leadership development programmes as participants explore questions about who they are and who they want to become as a leader. The presence and process of undoing teeters on a fine line between productive forms of shaking up one’s identity, and the possibility that this may become destructive. A series of propositions for leadership development facilitators, participants, and researchers regarding holding an ethic of care with an ethic of criticism will be presented.

Global Gender, Diversity, and Inclusion Best Practices: Think Global, Act Local

* Plaza Suite 10  * Session Type: Panel  * Track: Business

Globalisation has required managers to become fluent in the cultures and languages of the Russians, the Chinese, the Indians, and the Brazilians—among others. This creates interesting issues for leadership and talent management teams, namely: should leaders be the same worldwide or should they have distinctive talents and characteristics based on their location? Is there one leadership brand for a company, or many? How do we respect unique cultural identities and also align and implement a corporate diversity and inclusion mission and strategy around the world? This session will include the perspectives of consultants, researchers, educators, and directors with operational experience and responsibility for global gender, diversity and inclusion programs.

Present vs. Possible: Collective Courage to Lead into the Future

* Plaza Suite 11  * Session Type: Workshop  * Track: Development

Why do some groups thrive during times of difficulty while others decline? Based on the theory that a key variable is a group’s collective vision of the future, this workshop will share a framework to help individuals and groups identify current and desired orientations to the future, and provide tools that support vision-based leadership processes. Attendees will participate in pre- and post-tests coupled with a condensed version of the Strategic Futuring™ process to generate discussion, introspection, and group feedback.

Microsoft Front Lines: Leadership Development for a Changing Business World

* Plaza Suite 13  * Session Type: Case Study  * Track: Development

Rapidly growing emerging markets, changing competition, and global economic turbulence create significant challenges that call for leaders ready to respond quickly and appropriately to uncertain conditions. This session will provide an overview of a program, Front Lines, that combines leadership development with Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) and new business development to achieve a three-way win: for participants, the partner organizations, and the wider organization. This award-winning action-learning experience, held in Kenya (2010) and Peru (2011), links leadership learning directly to business results through work with local partners.

Mapping the Way to Global Leadership Competency: From Assessment to Coaching, Successful Models and Practices

* Plaza Suite 9  * Session Type: Workshop  * Track: Development

This workshop will introduce participants to a well-researched set of competencies shown to be essential for global leadership. The presenters, senior leadership development practitioners, will use three modalities: a brief lecturette on assessing global competencies; an exercise demonstrating how to train for global competencies using dialog as a method; and a case-study introducing options for coaching others toward global leadership competency.

Margins and Mainstreams: PhD Leadership Studies Programs in Higher Education

Plaza Suite 12
Session Type: Panel
Track: Education

This panel of deans and directors from a variety of PhD programs will examine common issues facing doctoral programs of leadership studies. Exemplifying reflective practice, they will discuss questions including: (1) What are the necessary pedagogical innovations in the field? (2) What are the technological innovations involved in doctoral leadership studies? (3) Do our programs teach about leadership or in addition, do they prepare people for leadership roles in social change? (4) What is the credibility of PhD leadership programs with accrediting committees and colleagues? (5) What are the revenue streams and possibilities for program sustainability?

The Impact of Worldviews on Women in Leadership

Plaza Suite 3
Session Type: Papers
Track: Scholarship

The purpose of this session is to present findings from four recent studies focused on the impact of worldviews on women in leadership. In recognizing the limitations under each worldview—particularly the treatment of the "other"—the panelists will encourage a dialogue that creates broader understanding about other belief systems and interpretative lenses.

Mormon Women and Leadership: The Influence of their Religious Worldview

This paper explores the impact of the Latter-Day Saints' (Mormon) worldview on women and leadership. The presentation will focus on four areas: (1) why examine the LDS worldview, (2) the LDS worldview concerning mortal progression, (3) the LDS culture, and (4) leadership development for LDS women.

Women's Leadership in an Evangelical Christian Context: Gendered Realities

Certain "gendered realities" are experienced by women working in an evangelical Christian context. The research base for this presentation is drawn from a decade-long initiative to identify and equip more women for senior administrative leadership in the Council for Christian Colleges & Universities. The presenter will discuss how an evangelical worldview adds complexities on both individuals and organizational culture as women navigate the labyrinth of leadership.

Political Leadership in the U.S. and the U.K.

Plaza Suite 6  Session Type: Panel  Track: Public

The United States and the United Kingdom are often viewed as the two leading models of political democracy in the world. Yet, these two systems practice very different forms of political democracy, with the U.S. employing a separation-of-powers model while the U.K. employs a fusion-of-powers model. In this panel discussion, three distinguished scholars and a member of the British Parliament will explore the worlds of political leadership in separation versus fusion of power systems.

Cultivating the Flame of Idealism: The City Year Leadership Development Experience

Plaza Suite 5  Session Type: Case Study  Track: Conference Theme

City Year unites young adults, ages 17-24, for a year of full time service, giving them the skills and opportunities to change themselves while changing the world. This leadership development model, The Flame of Idealism, distills more than two decades of innovation developing idealistic leaders willing and able to work for social change. Presenters will share: the conceptual framework for developing idealistic civic leaders, leadership development tools and exercises, and reports from the field—including the London office.

Leadership in a Global Community: Inclusion of Multiple Viewpoints and Voices

Plaza Suite 7  Session Type: Panel  Track: Development

Increasing complexity in 21st century leadership requires multiple voices, moving leadership practice away from individual solutions imposed by formal leaders. This panel discussion will: explore provocative questions about inclusive leadership; invite attendees to add their own questions; and address how inclusive leadership can be generated and what practices support others to engage in inclusive leadership.

Building Working Relationships Across Social Identity Differences

The context of leadership has evolved to incorporate greater social identity differences. The presenter will discuss a model and typology of tools developed from a study exploring the processes by which Black African American and White European American women enact leadership by creating and sustaining positive cross-race work relationships.

Karen Geiger  McColl School of Business, Queens University of Charlotte

Creating and Sustaining Inclusive Workplaces

Panelists will shed light on boundary spanning practices and bridging strategies that can be used by leaders and collectives to lead in more inclusive ways. Practical examples of creating conditions for positive contact across different groups, reinforcing informal norms of valuing differences, and holding multiple realities will be used to illustrate these practices and strategies.

Attachment Theory: Implications of New Developments for Leadership, Followership, and Organizational Change

Do people bring their families of origin to work? In many ways, yes! Attachment security, relatively stable internal “working models of relationships” derived from early childhood, has significant yet under-recognized influences on leadership, followership, and many other work-related variables. This panel will bring together complementary perspectives on attachment from practitioners and academics from the U.S., U.K., and continental Europe.

How Attachment Security Influences Leadership and Followership: Implications for Leadership and Leadership Development

Leadership and followership are dynamic relationships affected by attachment security, i.e. individuals’ relationship assumptions. These assumptions underlie implicit leadership theories, leadership style, and work relationships. Recent research on leaders’ insecure attachment shows negative, even destructive, impacts on insecure and secure constituents in crisis times. This presenter will explore how leadership development can mitigate this issue.

Tracey Manning University of Maryland

Forms of Attachment: New Insights for Leaders and Followers

Attachment theory usually applies attachment to people. This presentation will introduce the complementary concept of attachment to non-personal concepts such as professional identity. Evidence from several sectors worldwide demonstrates how individuals find security on a spectrum between people and professional identity. The implications for understanding between leaders and followers will be examined.

Peter Robertson Human Insight Ltd

Exploring from a Secure Base: Implications for Leading Change

People vary in attachment security and preferences for exploration or stability. Building on theory and research on secure attachment to people or professional identity, this presentation will examine organizational attachment and other work-related attachment based on cases from business and popular culture. Implications for team composition and leading change will also be explored.

Undergraduate Leadership Education: Program Development and Evaluation

While the number of undergraduate leadership education (ULE) programs is growing at a seemingly exponential rate, research and evaluation needed to inform best practices is lagging behind. In this panel, ULE practitioners, scholars, and funders across three top ULE programs will provide exemplars, common challenges, and recommendations for improvement. Themes will include original impetus for program initiation, pitfalls and strategies for program development, and integration and implementation of program evaluation.

Trained in that great tradition of leadership studies at the Ohio State University, where he received his Ph.D. in management in 1960, ROBERT J. HOUSE is one of the foremost experts on leadership across cultures. The principal investigator, and founder in the early 1990s, of the Global Leadership and Organizational Behavior Effectiveness Research Program (GLOBE), he has visited close to 40 countries during the course of the investigation. The GLOBE project, divided into four phases, has published two tomes—one examining leadership in 62 societies and the second taking a more in-depth look at 25 of those societies. The project has succeeded at providing a valuable resource for managers doing business in other countries and serves as a rich source of information for anyone interested in understanding how leadership grows in different cultural grounds.

In addition to his work developing GLOBE, House is best known for his creation of the Path-Goal Theory of Leader Effectiveness, which he developed in 1971 and revised in 1996. House describes the essence of the theory as “the meta proposition that leaders, to be effective, engage in behaviors that complement subordinates’ environments and abilities in a manner that compensates for deficiencies and is instrumental to subordinate satisfaction and individual and work unit performance.” The theory, which has been widely studied, also led House to the development, in 1976, of his well-known theory of Charismatic Leadership.

House’s refreshing ability to analyze and revise his own work twenty-five years later, is illustrative of his overall philosophy. He quotes D.O. Hebb’s maxim that “a good theory is one that holds together long enough to get you to a better theory,” then continues to reflect that, “the virtue of internalizing the spirit of these assertions is that if one does so one will never be compelled to defend one’s own theory, which inevitably will be shown to be false.”

A prolific writer, House has authored more than 130 journal articles, which have been reprinted in numerous anthologies. He is a cofounder of the premier leadership journal, Leadership Quarterly, where he also served as executive editor, and has received numerous awards throughout his career. He is a Fellow in the Academy of Management, the American Psychological Association, and the Society for Industrial/Organizational Psychology.

POLLY HIGGINS is a barrister, international environmental lawyer, and activist. A vocal spokesperson on Earth Law, she is a recognized expert in the field. She advises on EU and international environmental law, with particular expertise in earth jurisprudence. Her book, Eradicating Ecocide: Laws and Governance to Prevent the Destruction of Our Planet (Shepheard-Walwyn, 2010) won the People’s Book Prize and was a finalist for the Book of the Year Award.

Higgins recently mounted a global campaign to have Ecocide recognised by the UN as the fifth crime against peace, to sit alongside genocide, crimes against humanity, war crimes, and crimes of aggression. She defines Ecocide as the ‘extensive damage, destruction to or loss of ecosystems of a given territory, whether by human agency or by other causes, to such an extent that peaceful enjoyment by the inhabitants of that territory has been severely diminished.’

Voted by the Ecologist as one of the “World’s Top 10 Visionary Thinkers,” Higgins has been named “The Planet’s Lawyer” by the 2010 Performance Awards. She was identified as one of the top “unreasonable people” in the world by the cult U.S. online magazine Planet Green for refusing to accept the norm and hailed by The Guardian as one of their Green Heroes working for the right kind of environmental change.

Higgins has been a UK Associate of EnAct International, a consultancy that specialises in developing and strengthening governance systems that promote ecologically sustainable societies. She has also worked closely with TREC-UK, a network of scientists and engineers, to advance the concept of building solar power plants in the desert to provide the world with clean electricity. Higgins is the founder of Women in Sustainability and the Environment (WISE Women)— an international network that brings together women who are working on sustainability issues and the environment.

Higgins was born in 1968 and spent her childhood in the west of Scotland, in Stirlingshire and the Highlands. During her time as a student she met the Austrian artist and ecologist Hundertwasser who believed nature to be a community of living beings. This was to be the beginning of her examination of her world in a different context from that which viewed the world as a thing, to be traded and sold. Her years as a barrister in London courts, where she represented both individuals and corporations on discrimination cases and corporate law, led her to the conclusions that the Earth in need of a good lawyer and that adequate laws to protect the Earth do not exist.

CALL FOR PAPERS

Nonprofit Management and Leadership seeks to reflect the international growth and diversity of management, leadership, and third-sector issues in Europe, Asia, Latin America, and Africa. Manuscripts on topics of interest to an international audience of NGO management and leadership researchers and practitioners are invited from authors residing outside North America. An extensive panel of non-U.S. reviewers and associate editors is available. Submissions originating outside the United States are reviewed by experts familiar with the topic and country of origin.
This groundbreaking book combines the concepts of emotional intelligence and leadership in one model—emotionally intelligent leadership (EIL). This important resource offers students a practical guide for developing their EIL capacities and emphasizes that leadership is a learnable skill that is based on developing healthy and effective relationships. Step by step, the authors outline the EIL model (consciousness of context, consciousness of self, and consciousness of others) and explore the twenty-one capacities that define the emotionally intelligent leader.

Thoroughly revised and updated, this book is designed to help college students understand that they are capable of being effective leaders and to guide them in developing their leadership potential. It contains expanded new chapters and also includes the relational leadership model, uses a more global context and examples that relate to a wide variety of disciplines, contains a new section which emphasizes ways to work to accomplish change, and concludes with concrete strategies for activism.

Derived from the classic leadership book The Leadership Challenge, Fourth Edition, this is a concise, focused primer on the Five Practices of Exemplary Leadership for students. Grounded in the same extensive research as the best selling The Leadership Challenge, this book uses examples and language to which students in higher education can relate. It also features reflective and critical thinking activities at the end of each chapter to help students engage in each of the Five Practices.

This comprehensive handbook provides essential research, theoretical framing, and practical guidance to help higher education practitioners develop, advance, and sustain a student leadership program. Thoroughly revised, it introduces a model for designing and executing any student leadership program, which will serve as a framing device for the book. This model covers: Foundations of Leadership Education, Program Design, Program Context, and Program Delivery.

This book offers an approachable student textbook that engages the reader in understanding the nature of social change and the dimensions of leadership that help one become an effective change agent. The text includes case studies, reflection questions, and learning activities to help facilitate engagement with the Social Change Model of Leadership Development that is at the core of the book.
Leader to Leader is an award-winning quarterly report on management, leadership, and strategy written by today’s top leaders themselves. In each issue, the Leader to Leader Institute brings together a peerless selection of world-class executives, best-selling management authors, top consultants, and respected social thinkers.

Leader to Leader gives you unique insight into what top executives and thought leaders are planning for, what they see as the major challenges ahead, and how they are dealing with change.

When Coaching Leaders Becomes Tricky: Learning from Difficult Cases

* Plaza Suite 10  * Session Type: Workshop  * Track: Development

Organized around real cases encountered by coaches and business school faculty, the session will focus on issues that executives bring into coaching sessions, challenges associated with exploring those issues, and potential risks inherent in the context of executive coaching. This hands-on workshop will engage participants in an exploration of approaches to handling difficult leadership coaching situations and presenters will share expert opinions on the cases and the actual outcomes. Post-workshop recommended readings will provide additional information and resources for the participants.

The Leadership Industries and the Production of Leadership

* Plaza Suite 11  * Session Type: Panel  * Track: Business; Development

This interactive panel will explore what can be learned about leadership and leadership development by approaching both as increasingly marketable products and services. Panelists will address several questions to spark a discussion on what it means to participate in the leadership industries, a term coined to describe the loosely-coupled but ever growing network of individuals and organizations (including consultants, coaches, leadership institutes, business schools, publishing houses, and even the ILA itself) working to provide products and services that respond to and further promote demands for leadership development, research, and assessment.

Find Your Most Valued Personal Strengths Right Now!

Plaza Suite 12 Session Type: Workshop Track: Business

Globally, twenty percent of employees working in large organizations surveyed by the Gallup Organization “strongly agree” that their strengths are used every day in their jobs. How can that percentage be increased? The purpose of this workshop is to share the experience of the strength finding process used at the Boeing Company. Join this workshop to identify your top strengths, meet new people, learn characteristics of a strengths-focused organization, review workshop follow-on activities, and learn about available resources.

Exploring Distance in Leader-Follower Relationships

Plaza Suite 13 Session Type: Panel Track: Scholarship

Leaders face new challenges as they cope with changes in culture, technology, and the workplace. This panel will examine implications of these changes for effective leader-follower relations. Scholars will discuss research on leader-follower relations, focusing on the impact of distance—physical, interpersonal, and social—on organizations and societies. The panel will conclude by providing an outlook regarding where distance has been, where it is going, and what areas still lay unexplored for future researchers.

Remapping Leadership Education: Confronting Pervasive Myths in Developing College Students’ Leadership Capacities

Plaza Suite 3 Session Type: Workshop Track: Education

The goal of this session is to expand participants’ assumptions around the design and delivery of both curricular and co-curricular leadership education. The presenters will begin with an overview of several pervasive myths misinforming the design and delivery of college student leadership development programs. Participants will have the opportunity to engage in structured dialogues to identify how the myths manifest themselves on their campuses and how to disrupt their negative effects through policy and educational interventions.

Honoring Robert House (Lifetime Legacy Session)

Colleagues of Robert House will honor his defining contributions of his 50 year career of leadership scholarship. They will consider the relevance and impact of Path-goal Theory, Charismatic Leadership Theory, and the contributions GLOBE Project, with particular emphasis on the implications of his work for cross-cultural understanding. They will discuss the importance and significance of House’s work on the study and practice of leadership over time and in today’s boardrooms, classrooms, and communities. Professor House will personally discuss the status of the GLOBE project and take questions from the audience.

One Planet, Many Worlds: The Power of Leadership Artistry

The focus of this year’s Fetzer Dialogues will be on leadership practices that support an awareness of planet Earth. Inviting and integrating the contributions of many voices and perspectives, each dialogue will explore leadership experiences and questions that touch the world of artistry and, through the creative process, bridge many cultures and countless perspectives. The inquiry will explore how to foster necessary collaboration across old divides to solve seemingly impossible challenges. All three dialogues will follow a similar format: 1) comments and observations by the presenters, 2) reflections and conversation among small groups of participants about their knowledge/experience/reflections on the theme, 3) full room dialogue.

Dialogue #2: Leadership and the Power of Poetry

The second dialogue will explore the theme of leadership and the language of poetry, specifically how the language of poetry can serve the work of leadership. Whether as a writer of poetry or simply one who appreciates and reads poetry, the language of poetry combines a sparseness and richness, the ability to hold complexity and paradox, and a capacity to point to what matters most. While poetry has proven to be a powerful communication tool for leaders, perhaps equally important are the subtle practices imbedded in great poetry—the practices of rich language, deep listening, and human connection.

Ethical Dialogue: Developing Ethical Leaders and Organizations in a Global Environment

Ethical behavior is recognized as indispensable for long-term success and effectiveness, and ethics is becoming the defining issue in many corporations, governments, and other institutions. Yet ethical meltdowns are rampant in society. So, how can we develop leaders to act ethically in situations that are rarely, if ever, clear? In this workshop, participants will gain an understanding of the key conditions that can support the development of ethical leaders; explore and reflect on their way of thinking, feeling, and behaving when faced with an ethically charged situation; and think about what they can do to further develop their own capacity and capability to act ethically and create ethical organizational cultures.

Mind the Gaps: Research on Mentorship, Wisdom, and Mindsets

Plaza Suite 4
Session Type: Papers
Track: Scholarship

Does Mentorship Really Map to Leadership Development?

Many organizations utilize mentorship programs for the specific purpose of developing leaders. Surprisingly, there is little research on the impact of mentorship on leadership skills. In this study, mentor-protégé pairs were interviewed and surveyed to determine mentors' impact on protégés' development of leadership skills. This presentation will analyze the survey data and focus on implications for leadership development programs and for individuals seeking and offering mentorship.

Capturing Wisdom for Leadership on One Planet of Many Cultures

Senge (2005) quotes a senior UN adviser as saying: "...I've concluded that there's only one real problem: over the past 100 years, the power that technology has given us has grown beyond anyone's wildest imagination, but our wisdom has not." The presenter will discuss research that links particular mentoring approaches to the development of leaders with the wisdom and skills to address 21st century challenges.

Repositioning Mindset Work in Leadership Development

Calls for mindset change are endemic to discussions of organizational and social problems and the need for leadership that can engage with contemporary circumstances. This paper calls for a new conceptualization of mindset work that is consistent with an emergent view of leadership, and argues that mindset is constructed in embodied interactions and should be understood within a process ontology.

Humanity at a Threshold

Plaza Suite 7
Session Type: Panel
Track: Conference Theme

Humanity is experiencing serious shifts in the paradigms of values, meaning, and ontological orientation. The nuanced complexity of today's world calls for sensing and feeling our way into situations as well as logical determination. This panel will introduce intellectual models to help conceptualize the threshold humanity is facing, including reflections on the strategic importance of integrative research and multi- or trans-disciplinary approaches.

Realpolitiks: Has Homo Hierarchicus Disappeared?

In times of chaos and struggles for access to limited resources at planetary level, what should we fear from the four horsemen of the Apocalypse? What are the challenges faced by today's leadership?

* Nicole (Schwartz) Morgan
Professor of Philosophy, Royal Military College of Canada

Seeking an Axiological Dimension of Leadership in this Age of Thresholding

Contemporary critical challenges call for a new mode of reflection. Historically, intellectual reflection has been used to develop solutions that are applied to situations. Today calls for existential reflection, a sensing into and discovering what the world situation holds and what it means to be in this time and place.

Fully Charged: How Great Leaders Boost their Organization’s Energy and Ignite High Performance

- Plaza Suite 10
- Session Type: Workshop
- Track: Business

Most leaders and leadership teams have experienced the ebb and flow of different states of energy in their organizations. This session, based on the Harvard Business Review Press book Fully Charged: How Great Leaders Boost their Organization’s Energy and Ignite High Performance (2011) authored by Heike Bruch and the presenter, will: (1) enable participants to start engaging with the organizational energy concept for their context; (2) identify the specific energy states of the participants’ organizations, units, or teams; (3) familiarize participants with leadership strategies to sustain energy and the human potential in their organizations, units, or teams; and (4) challenge the authors’ work and thinking. The target audience of the workshop are senior managers and HR professionals and at the same time researchers with interests in topics around collective energy, collective engagement, or leadership.

Mapping Research and Theories on Servant Leadership

The paper reviews fifteen years (1994-2009) of published leadership development interventions to find out what aspects of leadership have been addressed by current leadership development practitioners. Specifically, the research uses the servant leadership framework to examine the extent to which servant leadership behavior is prevalent within the leadership development literature to develop insights for those developing leadership development programs.

Innovations in Leadership Development for Sustainable Organisations—Are We Moving Far and Fast Enough?

Plaza Suite 12  Session Type: Panel  Track: Conference Theme

The panel will provide evidence of current innovations in leadership development that address the challenge of sustainability, and will use narrative analysis to provide a critical framework to examine such developments. Panelists will share evidence of innovation in leadership development at seven major organisations that have attempted to engage with this challenge, exploring why the organisations decided to pursue this activity, their goals, what informed their approach, achievements, and the key variables influencing outcomes. The learning outcomes of this session will be increased familiarity with innovative approaches to leadership development being pursued in response to the conference theme, and the implications for participants’ own work, as well as enhanced capability to critically interrogate the value of different approaches to working with sustainability.

Effective Leadership in Social Enterprise

Plaza Suite 5  Session Type: Panel  Track: Public

This session will address the leadership challenges of creating and sustaining high-performing nonprofit organisations, particularly large, complex nonprofits (NGOs). Many established nonprofits are examining their methods of management, and are formulating and testing new theories of how to effectively manage and lead. This discussion will both examine the applicability of existing leadership development programs to nonprofit organizational challenges and identify innovative solutions for preparing emerging leadership to meet these challenges.

Leadership Across Cultures

Plaza Suite 6  Session Type: Case Studies  Track: Public

Presenters will share case studies that explore the intersection of organizational transformation and leadership development in countries that are not traditionally the focus of leadership research. The Afghanistan case study examines leadership-in-teams in a context where Islamic principles of leadership are implicit, and the Sub-Saharan countries case study utilizes Hofstede’s cultural software of the mind, diffusion of innovation, and transformational leadership. A concluding discussion will focus on the wider implications for leadership development in a globalized world.

Leadership in Teams: A Case Study of Global Development Alliances in Afghanistan

The case study examines the Global Development Alliances experience, funded by U.S. AID, in Afghanistan from 2005 to 2008. It explores the manifestation of leadership in teams in GDAs, cultural and socio-political context of the alliances, and the alliance dynamics of collaboration and competition. The presentation will include a brief comparison of Islamic and Christian principles of leadership, and will focus on implications of the differences in the locus of leadership, formality of leadership, and functions of leadership.

Evaluation of the Effectiveness of an Initiative to Develop Leadership Skills Among Women in Africa: A Case Study

The focus of this presentation will be the impact and effectiveness of a three-year leadership development initiative implemented in five sub-Saharan countries (Kenya, Uganda, Tanzania, Ghana and Nigeria). The objectives of this evaluation research were to: determine the program effectiveness by observing the changes it effected in trainees and their communities; assess the pedagogical practices used by both international (USA) and local (African) instructors to deliver instruction that directly applied to the trainees’ workplaces; and evaluate sustainability strategies to support trainee projects and future leadership programs.

Effective Leaders: A Qatari Perspective

Research about cultural differences between Western expatriate workers and host Arabian Gulf nationals has been minimal. This panel will begin by introducing original research conducted at the Qatar Foundation in fall 2010 pertaining to the organizational and socio-cultural dynamics of the expatriate worker in Qatar. A Qatari conceptualization of the effective leader that emerged from data collected in focus groups conducted with Qataris in Doha in spring 2011 will follow. The focus of the session will be on the workplace implications of these findings, rather than their theoretical underpinnings.

The Blame-Taker’s Dilemma: Actions and Reactions in the Wake of Organizational Failure (Kenneth E. Clark Student Research Paper Award Winner)

Rudolph Giuliani once said: “It is in times of crisis that good leaders emerge.” His observation echoes the widely-held view that crises create conditions rife for leadership. Yet, systematic evidence on what leaders—recognized and emergent—should do after an organizational failure remains sparse. An obvious and often-prescribed recommendation is to apologize. However, “apologies” communicate two, distinct messages: responsibility (they take blame) and regret (they express remorse). Though theoretically and practically distinguishable, taking blame and expressing remorse, independently, have not received much research attention. This leaves an important gap, as organizational actors often do one without the other. This research focuses on blame-taking, examining its independent incidence and effectiveness after an organizational failure. Over the course of three studies, it became evident that blame-taking was roundly preferred to remorse because blame-taking was seen to establish an actor’s character more than remorse does. Overall, this research highlights a disconnect between what organizational actors do and what others want them to do. People appear reluctant to take blame, even though doing so could help to demonstrate or confirm their leadership.

Leadership Development in Academia: Educating Leaders Who Educate Leaders

* Plaza Suite 11  * Session Type: Panel  * Track: Education

Academia serves an important function in society as it educates a society's future leaders to act with awareness, integrity, and authenticity. Ironically, there is often much less emphasis placed on leadership development for leaders in higher education. These four presentations will integrate scientific and practical perspectives on leadership development in an academic setting and share proven models.

Responding to Leadership Challenges in Academia

The panelist will discuss the importance of academic leadership and opportunities for improving academic leader selection and development processes. Examples of how major leadership theories have informed responses to academic leadership challenges will be woven into the presentation.

Plaza Suite 3  Session Type: Papers  Track: Public, Scholarship

To address the “what for” of leadership, this panel will consider the centrality of peace as one outcome of remapping the purposes of leadership. This session will present a model of leadership for peace and will focus on two prominent cases. The first will discuss resistance movements during the apartheid and democratic eras in South Africa, and the second will explain the role of radical and civilized leadership from the recent uprising in Egypt.

The Dialects of Leadership for Peace: Toward a Moral Model of Resistance as the Path to Peace

This paper describes an approach to remapping the purpose of leadership by considering the dialectic of power and resistance embedded in leadership. The author will discuss a framework for understanding social change within organizations and societies, which focuses on the centrality of relationships, the capacity for moral imagination to envision a new reality of peace, and risk.

Bernice Ledbetter  Pepperdine University

A Pedagogy of Peace? On the Problem and Promise of Resistance Leadership in South Africa and its Implications for Human Dignity

This paper argues for a perspective and practice of leadership characterised by a pedagogy of peace. It highlights resistance leadership and its conflicting roles in a selection of grassroots, civil society resistance movements during the apartheid and democratic eras in South Africa. The presenter will discuss how a methodological framework embedded within the renowned South African Kairos document (1985, 1986), provides the theoretical content for a pedagogy of peace.

Clint Le Bruyns  Stellenbosch University

The Promise of Peace in the Recent Uprising in Egypt

The non-centralized approach taken and the lack of a specific ideology make the Egyptian Revolution a unique case study as a modern day revolution for peace. Without a pre-organizational plan, the revolutionaries created a utopian society in Tahrir Square and elsewhere, where highly moral values dominated the scene and were observable everywhere in the world. As one of millions who participated in the success of the 2011 Egyptian Revolution, the presenter will interpret the Egyptian Revolution through the lens of an Egyptian anthropologist.

Two Faces of Leadership: Out Front and Behind the Scenes

Plaza Suite 4  Session Type: Panel  Track: Public Service, Scholarship

People often think of leaders as prominent individuals who hold official posts, enjoy the perks, privileges, and power associated with these posts, and are lightning rods for publicity and attention. However, there is another face of leadership. This panel will discuss several versions of this more elusive type of leadership: “leading from behind.” This type of leadership is prominent in several cultures; the low-profile leadership often associated with women; and the organizing activity that has fueled contemporary “leaderless revolutions” in the Middle East. The presenters will discuss leadership as agency or interaction, and discuss the requisites of a theory of leadership that would encompass these different varieties of leadership.

One Ego, Many Problems: Hubris vs. Leadership at the Top

* Plaza Suite 7  *  Session Type: Panel  *  Track: Scholarship

There remain a number of unanswered questions about the nature of hubris (when power goes wrong) and its relationship with (moral) leadership (when power goes right). The purpose of this panel is to explore how hubris and leadership appear and develop at the top. Its originality lies in gathering leadership scholars from the social sciences and the humanities to enlighten the classical question of power and morality through the specific topic of hubris, which has been raised and illustrated recently in the field of strategic leadership and corporate finance. A literature review and case studies about the nature and impact of so-called hubristic CEOs on companies will be followed by a multidisciplinary exploration of hubris and power, and an exploration of strategies to prevent hubris. Time will be allocated for deep audience engagement with the presenters.

A Conversation with Georgia Sorenson

* Plaza Suite 3  *  Session Type: Panel  *  Track: Scholarship

This session will provide a semi-structured interview with a pioneer in the field of leadership studies, Georgia J. Sorenson. Long at the center of the development of leadership studies as a field of study, she was the founding director of the James MacGregor Burns Academy of Leadership at the University of Maryland, was instrumental in the establishment of the ILA, and has authored or co-authored countless articles and books including the Encyclopedia of Leadership, The Quest for a General Theory of Leadership and the acclaimed Dead Center: Clinton Gore Leadership and the Perils of Moderation. This interview will seek her insights on the past, present, and future of leadership studies, and provide her with an opportunity to speak to her experiences, especially her close association with other scholars of distinction such as James MacGregor Burns.

Remapping Leadership in Schools: Preparing Teachers to Lead

- Plaza Suite 7
- Session Type: Panel
- Track: Education

Traditionally, educational leadership programs in higher education focus on preparing administrators for formal positions in the school’s hierarchy. However, transformation of schools requires developing teacher leadership. There is a growing movement to develop Teacher Leadership degree programs, which differ from the traditional Educational Leadership degrees in that they focus on helping teachers exhibit the qualities of a transformative leader. This session will describe examples of programs designed to develop teacher leadership at the undergraduate, graduate and professional development levels.

Bringing LEADS to Life: A ”For Health, By Health” Leadership Development Framework in Canada

Like those in other sectors, health leaders of the 21st century will have to see the future faster, manage and mentor talent better, and service growing health needs more efficiently. Unlike others, until just recently, the health sector in Canada has traditionally not put a priority on leadership development. The presenters represent an emerging community of practice committed to developing a better understanding of the discipline of leadership as it applies to the unique circumstances of health care. After sharing a leading-edge leadership development model jointly developed by senior health leaders and the academic community from across Canada, representatives from the UK (and potentially other countries who have been invited) will explore its application to other health jurisdictions, and describe collaborative international efforts to grow medical leadership in their countries.

Leadership and Professional Identity: Conflicts, Discourses, and Intersections

This panel poses that professional organisations such as universities, hospitals and knowledge organisations are distinctive ‘identity workspaces’ (Petriglieri & Petriglieri, 2010) that invite new theorisations of leadership and its practice. As the three papers attest, the nature of the complexity of these organisations disrupts more conventional and corporate delineations and conventions, thus providing a real opportunity for new insights into identity, relational, and processual dynamics of leadership and its development.

The Conflicted Leader: Leadership and Identity in Higher Education

This analysis is based on a series of empirical investigations of leadership, identity, and change within the UK higher education sector, including a qualitative study of the distribution and development of leadership in universities, a case-based study of employer engagement in HE institutions, and a mixed-methods study of academic identity and leadership. The focus of this paper is how professional identity may play an important role in negotiating and managing the boundaries between individual and group level identities within knowledge-based organizations such as universities.

Competing Discourses: Identity Work of Health Professionals

This paper explores leadership, quality, and systems as three key discourses that are creating complex work for health professionals having to operate between and between the three. Workplace Civility: A Whole Systems Approach to Leadership Ethics and a Culture of Respectful Engagement

Plaza Suite 5  Session Type: Panel  Track: Business

Intense interest in civility has been growing exponentially over the past ten years. Increases in incivility are due partially to the rapidity of technological communication across multiple cultures with little understanding of the recipients’ mores and customs in business transactions. This panel discussion will: (1) propose a five-stage model of ethical development as it relates to relational practice in organizations, (2) address the role of leadership and key stakeholders in the creation of organizational values that build and maintain a culture of civility, and (3) stress the salience of a systems approach to understanding team roles that enable disruptive actions and propose strategies to build respectful engagement across cultural boundaries. Specific interventions from case examples including team assessment, building team norms of civility, and intervening with those who enable a culture of incivility will be presented. The commentator will address the significance of the problem of incivility and the leadership imperative to facilitate diverse cultures of dignity and respect in the workplace.

One Planet, Many Worlds: The Power of Leadership Artistry

Plaza Suite 2  Session Type: Workshop  Track: Development, Conference Theme

The focus of this year’s Fetzer Dialogues will be on leadership practices that support an awareness of planet Earth. Inviting and integrating the contributions of many voices and perspectives, each dialogue will explore leadership experiences and questions that touch the world of artistry and, through the creative process, bridge many cultures and countless perspectives. The inquiry will explore how to foster necessary collaboration across old divides to solve seemingly impossible challenges. All three dialogues will follow a similar format: 1) comments and observations by the presenters, 2) reflections and conversation among small groups of participants about their knowledge/experience/reflections on the theme, 3) full room dialogue.

Dialogue #3: Leadership and the Power of Narrative

Carol Pearson has coined the term “narrative intelligence” and the final dialogue will be about the role of that intelligence in the work of leaders, particularly leadership for transformation. What is the power of a story that remains vital over time, commands attention, and maintains a focus on the essence of the work ahead? What are the stories that remind us who we are, and what we are about? And what is the role of such story in our leadership work? As leaders, how do we develop an ear for story, and a gift with story?

Emergent Leadership: Remapping 21st Century Paradigms of Leadership

Plaza Suite 1  Session Type: Workshop  Track: Development

Current traditional theories and paradigms of leadership may be inadequate and insufficient for developing leaders who can be effective in a world where individuals (whether citizens or employees) are demanding more from their leaders. Working in small groups, participants will engage in discussions around emergent factors that are changing the nature of leadership in the 21st century, discuss how these factors should impact leadership development, and then as a large group explore suggestions for remapping strategies to address emergent needs.

Engaging Junior Scholars in the Discourse: Making Meaning of Challenges and Opportunities in Leadership Scholarship

* Plaza Suite 10
  Session Type: Panel
  Track: Scholarship

At the 2010 ILA Conference, a panel of senior leadership scholars assessed the state of the leadership field and considered future directions. Central to the discussion was the reality that leadership is a relatively young, interdisciplinary field searching to find itself among more mature disciplines in a complex, changing world. Afterwards a cadre of emerging scholars began an informal discussion regarding their role in shaping the future of the discipline. This panel, of both emerging and more senior scholars, will continue that dialogue and invite attendees into the discussion.

One Complex Planet, Many Emerging Worlds: Remapping the Purposes of Leadership in the 21st Century

Plaza Suite 12  Session Type: Panel  Track: Education

We are, according to Stephen Hawking, living in the century of complexity. What does this mean for leadership in the 21st Century? The aim of this interactive panel session is to provide an overview of complexity frameworks, reflect on the interrelationships between contemporary leadership practices and the challenges of complexity, and discuss research implications.

Complexity and Risk in Universities in Australia: Are There Emerging Leadership Literacies for Knowledge Enterprises in Times of Flux?

Leadership literacies for the knowledge era enterprise rest on humanist principles of Servant Leadership theory and interconnect with sustainability and complexity through the premise that leadership is not set apart from the living systems—human and environmental—that we serve. Leaders also understand that these living systems are dynamic, emergent, and unpredictable.

Heather Davis  School of Management, RMIT

Beyond Metaphor: Practical Implications of Complexity Theory

Some concepts from complexity theory have passed into everyday language (edge of chaos, tipping point), yet the language is still opaque to many. The presenter will highlight three key concepts of this theory, which have particular implications for leaders: attractors, emergence, and self-organisation. This presentation will challenge leaders to move beyond complexity theory as a source of metaphors to practical engagement with such leadership questions.

Tim Harle  Human Insight Ltd.

Structure, Emergence, and Dialogue: A Complexity View of Organizations as Turbulent Containers for Dialogue and Change

This presentation will focus on complexity and change in organizations in times of flux. As complexity-influenced organizational theories gain acceptance and these initiatives begin to move beyond mere metaphors toward actionable objectives, a key area still needing further development is how change itself will be conceptualized within complex adaptive systems.

David Holzmer  Union Institute & University

An Attention-Based View of Knowledge-Intensive Organisations: Zeitgeist Leadership and Complex Realities

A longitudinal case study of successive leadership in a complex strategic business unit that explores how business school deans strategise within a discourse of increasing marketization. How do the leaders pay attention to complex realities during their tenures?

Embodyed Leadership: A Wake-Up Call for Authentic Commitment

Plaza Suite 2  Session Type: Workshop  Track: Development

The world’s greatest challenges require a new level of wisdom—leadership that moves beyond the realm of the mind and includes body, heart, and spirit. This workshop will introduce somatic practices that invite leaders to access their whole thinking, feeling, and sensing self. Participants will practice techniques for accessing the somatic realm to embody an authentic commitment, gain insights relevant developing their own leadership, and explore approaches to cultivate leadership with clients and students.

Teaching Leadership to Undergraduates: Reflections from the Front Line

Plaza Suite 3  Session Type: Papers  Track: Education

This session will link to the conference theme by exploring the needs and experiences of a specific population (undergraduate students) and the contribution that a critical, experiential, and reflective pedagogy can make in preparing them for future leadership roles. Following the presentation of papers, the panel chair will provide a commentary on the key themes, issues, and challenges raised, and open the floor for what is expected to be a lively and informative debate between panelists and the audience.

Authentic Leadership Development in the Classroom: Fallacy or Reality?

Avolio et al. (2009) purport that authentic leadership and authentic leadership development are central to the evolution of leadership studies. This paper explores how do we incorporate some key authentic leadership development elements such as self-awareness (Cooper, et al., 2005) a reflective journey (George et al., 2007) and three key values such as being reflective, working experientially and thinking critically (Sinclair, 2007) while respecting each individual developmental need in the classroom.

Inmaculada Adarves-Yorno  University of Exeter

Doubt, or Managing the Monster of Ambiguity in Undergraduate Teaching

Drawing on theories of liminality and constructivist perspectives on studying and learning leadership, this paper suggests that grappling with doubt and uncertainty about threshold concepts (like critical thinking) is central to developing leadership practice. The panelist will discuss implication for educators, such as how to offer a space in which students are able to experience the ambiguity of these concepts in a way which challenges them and requires them to take risks, but which does not leave them feeling rudderless.

Beverley Hawkins  Centre for Leadership Studies, University of Exeter

Leading Learning: Practicing and Teaching the Values of Critical Thinking, Reflective Practice, and Working Experientially

Sinclair (2007) proposed that effective leadership and effective teaching share many characteristics, and argued that three values are central to both: thinking critically, using reflective practice, and working experientially. This paper uses three lenses to explore the value and challenge that such practices bring to one’s role as a teacher. The presenter will share insights and reflections from an autobiographical and pedagogical perspective.

Anne O’Brien  Centre for Leadership Studies, University of Exeter

Leadership for Prosperity: Wisdom Beyond the Bottom Line

Plaza Suite 5  Session Type: Panel  Track: Public Service, Business

This panel will examine the concept of leading for prosperity versus growth. Whereas business success is usually measured in terms of economic growth, prosperity allows for human flourishing within the ecological limits of the planet. The presenters will discuss the implications of this approach for business leadership, including the notion of using environmental sustainability, social justice, and spiritual fulfillment as additional bottom lines to expand the definition of business success and provide a broader understanding of the impact of business actions in an increasingly interconnected world. Whereas the first presenter will explore questions from a broad social perspective, the second panelist will focus on the personal journey of change required of individual business leaders accountable for balancing business success with social justice and ecological sustainability.

Ethical and Value-Based Leadership: Lending Purpose and Probit to Choices that Influence People and the Planet

- Plaza Suite 9
  Session Type: Workshop
  Track: Development

Ethical leadership is hugely important in a time challenged with conflicts, turmoil, and calamities spanning the world. While considerable work has been dedicated to understanding ethical leadership and its significance, there is relatively less focus on applying tools to determine and develop value-based decision making. This workshop will guide value prioritization and its application in decision-making processes for leaders faced with ethical dilemmas through a stepwise approach leading to an understanding of the impact of their choices on the larger world. The learning outcomes will be a set of tools to prioritize personal values and identify solutions in ethical situations.

The Nexus Between Leadership and Culture: Studies from East Asia, Middle East, North Africa, and the Philippines

- Plaza Suite 7
  Session Type: Papers
  Track: Scholarship

The three papers together will offer rich conceptual explorations and empirical discussion for understanding leadership and culture. Discussion will focus on implications for leadership development, particularly the preparation of expatriates to serve in the cultures and countries represented, and implications for future research.

From Housewives to Movie Stars: Examining Filipino Perceptions Toward National Leadership

Applying extant literature on Filipino socio-cultural anthropology with extant research on the leadership of former presidents Corazon Aquino and Joseph Estrada, the paper explores ways in which Filipino culture and perceptions about its national leaders have an impact in Philippine national progress.

- Jess Delegencia World Bridges; Eastern University

Identifying and Prioritizing Effective Leadership Behaviors in the Middle East and North Africa (MENA)

Cross-culturally competent leadership gives companies a competitive advantage, whereas the inability of companies and their leadership to adapt to foreign cultures has been a major cause of business failures. This paper explicates perceptions of effective leadership from MENA leader perspectives, with implications for expatriate leadership development.

- Deanne de Vries Agility; Eastern University

Women who Lead: Perspectives from Hong Kong, China, and Korea

This presentation will discuss female leadership among three different societies in Hong Kong, China, and Korea. Female leaders have unique characteristics and styles that have attracted a lot of research. Due to differences in cultural values, the roles females in Asian societies play are more extensive than their western counterparts.

ILA Strategic Planning Listening Session

- Plaza Suite 13

The ILA Board invites the participation of ILA members and stakeholders in the next phase of the ILA Strategic Plan. With participants from over 60 countries, this global conference provides a unique opportunity to hear from the diverse range of scholars, educators, coaches, and practitioners in attendance. The focus of this session will be to hear participant ideas about how the ILA can increase and deepen its global reach, and better understand leadership development and education needs in regions around the world.

Religious Leadership in Critical Times

Plaza Suite 11  Session Type: Papers  Track: Public; Scholarship

This session will examine religious leadership in light of contemporary public challenges in diverse, complex societies. Together, these papers provide analysis of religion’s critical role in public leadership in the face of pressing challenges. Following the presentation of papers, the panel chair will provide a commentary on the key themes and potential broader applications.

Mapping Interfaith and Civic Leadership in Richmond, Virginia

Douglas Hicks  Jepson School of Leadership Studies, University of Richmond
Rachel Templeton  University of Richmond

This paper outlines an argument for the inter-religious and civic significance of religious diversity in a dynamic metropolitan region. The analysis fills a gap in public understanding about how leaders across religious boundaries do (or do not) build networks to confront shared challenges, from healthcare to transportation to public safety.

Taking Responsibility for Climate Change: The Role of Religious Congregations and Religious Leaders

Thad Williamson  Jepson School of Leadership Studies, University of Richmond

Climate changes pose an extraordinarily difficult leadership challenge, requiring responses both within nations and in the international arena. This paper offers a critical assessment of the response to climate change mustered by congregations and denominational leaders in the U.S., with a particular focus on more liberal religious denominations, and offers suggestions for how religious leaders can be much more effective in addressing this issue.

Pastoral Leadership for Police in Crisis

Alexander Evans  Second Presbyterian Church

Drawing on firsthand accounts by police officers and chaplains responding to the Virginia Tech shootings, this paper examines pastoral leadership and support for police officers who have experienced violence and trauma. The research offers religious leaders and communities—and other leaders and citizens who work with first responders—insights and a framework for providing compassion, support, and encouragement for this particular group of public leaders.

Third in Line Takes the Lead: How to Stop Violence in the Street

Plaza Suite 1  Session Type: Presentation  Track: Conference Theme

Violence in the streets can be a reality of city life. Drawing on observations by CCTV cameras, the presenter will show that bystanders can effectively stop violence, but only if several people take the initiative to do so independently and in series. There are implications for the understanding of leadership in groups, and for how individuals can more effectively act on what they believe is right.

Public Leadership Styles in Realizing Iconic Urban Projects

Plaza Suite 1  Session Type: Paper  Track: Public

Successful completion of an iconic project involves the manipulation, often over decades, of a complex web of numerous interrelated physical and social variables. This research set out to study the leadership styles that public development authorities adopt in the process from initiation to realization of iconic urban projects. Based on an in-depth case study of three iconic projects (Rotterdam Central District; Bilbao Abandoibarra; and Paris Rive Gauche), the presenters will share theories concerning leadership styles of urban planners and public leaders.

One Planet, Many Worlds: Reconceptualizing the Scholarship of Women, Leadership, and Communication Studies

Plaza Suite 10  Session Type: Panel  Track: Scholarship

Communicative Understandings of Women’s Leadership Development: From Ceilings of Glass to Labyrinth Paths, edited by Elesha L. Ruminski and Annette M. Holba (Lexington Books, 2011), intertwines the disciplines of communication studies, leadership studies, and women’s studies to offer theoretical and practical reflections about women’s leadership development in academic, organizational, and political contexts from both feminist and non-feminist perspectives. Four contributing authors will share new models, theories, and perspectives, and will highlight how this new scholarship adds to existing understandings of Leadership Studies. The audience will be invited into a discussion about how this new scholarship changes existing understandings of gendered thinking related to women, leadership, and communication.

Pink Saris, Rough Aunties, and Sisters in Law—Lessons in Leadership from the Films of British Filmmaker Kim Longinotto

* Plaza Suite 9  *  Session Type: Workshop  *  Track: Development

This session will demonstrate how films can be used to inspire leaders, teach leadership, and explore cultural differences relating to leadership issues. Filmmaker Kim Longinotto travels the world to find and profile thought-provoking and inspiring leaders, showing them as they struggle for justice, women’s rights, and human rights. Scenes from her films, Pink Saris (set in Northern India), Rough Aunties (South Africa), and Sisters in Law (West Africa) will be used to explore the emergence of new leaders and to identify the leadership behaviors that contribute to social change.

Trending Tigers and Leading Lions: Common Values in Chinese and South African Approaches to Leadership

* Plaza Suite 11  *  Session Type: Presentation  *  Track: Conference Theme

Interaction between China and the African continent is growing at a rapid rate. With the growing presence of both Chinese and African leaders working and leading in their respective counterpart’s context, how do their individual approaches and praxis of leadership compare? This presentation will propose that the Chinese cultural value of guanxi and the African social philosophy of ubuntu might serve as a values platform where the common value of humaneness could form a bridge between these two different approaches to organizational leadership.

Blowing your Mindset: Viral Self Leadership

* Plaza Suite 13  *  Session Type: Panel  *  Track: Development

Using a framework of mindsets, meanings, and impacts, this session will explore the landscape of developing Self-Leadership in Kenya. This new approach is being practiced at a private education facility founded to provide education and training to support socioeconomic growth and human capital development. A core part of the curriculum draws on Neuro Semantics and Meta-Coaching as methods to develop student self-leadership and personal growth while also encouraging the transfer of leadership skills to others. The presenters will introduce this model for discussion and debate, and will share findings of an ongoing research study into the effectiveness of this model.

Online, On-Site, or Blended: Escalating Pressures and Dilemmas in Remapping the Delivery of Leadership Education

Plaza Suite 3  Session Type: Panel  Track: Education

The need for penetrating and effective leadership education grows more critical each year, yet time is short; budgets are tight; students — mid-career students in particular — clamor for customized services; and faculty struggle to adapt to changing professional insights and expectations. Panelists will examine major considerations to weigh when choosing presentation channels for high-impact leadership instruction with scholarly merit. This session will be especially relevant for those involved in developing and delivering leadership courses, and for those focused on forces and trends in quality leadership education in general.

Connect, Connect, Connect: Creating a New Approach to Social, Collaborative, and Emergent Leadership

Plaza Suite 2  Session Type: Case Study  Track: Business

In large globally dispersed corporations, it can be a challenge for staff and managers to feel they have a voice or to take up leadership where it is needed. This session will share a successful model implemented at ING Bank that shifted the focus from ‘knowledge management’ to ‘coaching ourselves’. This approach of collaborative learning among many hundreds of people around the world working in small groups is quite structured, using short sessions on both shared issues and relevant skills. It sounds simple - that's the beauty of it: and it works by allowing the complexity of life in a huge, hierarchical, bureaucratic, control-oriented financial institution.

Moving the Field Forward: Accreditation, Certification, Formalized Review, or Status Quo?

Plaza Suite 7  Session Type: Panel  Track: Education

The importance of leadership and the opportunity institutions of higher education have to provide an environment for leadership education have added to the dramatic increase in the number of leadership studies programs offered throughout universities and colleges over the past two decades. As the field continues to grow and patterns emerge in areas such as content, teaching, and outcomes, a purposeful dialogue concerning formalized program review and opportunities that may exist in these systems to advance the field of leadership studies. This session looks to engage the ILA membership in an interactive and purposeful discussion in regards to formalized program review.

Keith Grint

KEITH Grint is currently a professor at Warwick University Business School where he teaches Public Leadership.

A highly respected leadership scholar, Grint has held a variety of academic posts including: Professor of Defence Leadership at Cranfield University, Professor of Leadership Studies and Director of the Lancaster Leadership Centre at Lancaster University Management School, Director of Research at the Said Business School, and Fellow in Organizational Behaviour, Templeton College, University of Oxford. He remains an Associate Fellow at Said and Oxford.

Grint writes prolifically on a wide variety of topics—many of which are also being examined at this conference. An overview of his 61 books, chapters, and journal articles illustrates the breadth of his curiosity and intellectual mastery, as well as his influential contributions to the field. Averaging a book a year since 1995, he most recently authored or co-edited: The Sage Handbook of Leadership; Sage Major Works in Leadership; Leadership: A Very Short Introduction; The New Public Leadership Challenge; and Leadership, Management and Command: Rethinking D-Day.

Professor Grint has also contributed to the development of the field of leadership by co-founding and co-editing the Journal Leadership (Sage) and by co-creating the annual International Conference on Studying Leadership.

In common with a number of England’s most influential thinkers, Grint embarked on a rich and varied pre-academic career. Before becoming a fully fledged scholar, he was employed as an agricultural labourer, a factory worker, an industrial cleaner, a removals worker, a freezer operative, a swimming pool attendant, a postman, a clerical worker, and—perhaps most useful to an academic career—a part-time karate teacher.

RT@fetzerinstitute: “Do you need justice in order to forgive?” Fetzer advisor Miroslav Volf responds. http://bit.ly/1s55vm

In what way have dark moments in our history challenged your capacity to forgive?

The Fetzer Institute
“...my deepest lessons [in forgiveness] have come from having to be in the company of despots...”
