PhD in Leadership and Change Program Reception in Boston!

Join us to learn more about our Program, meet students, faculty and alumni!

Thursday, 28 October, 6:15 pm
The Regis Room at the Marriott Copley Place

www.ila-net.org/conferences/hotel.htm
The theme of the conference is Leadership2.0: Time for Action, and the conference planners hope participants will explore the many ways in which leadership translates into action as well as being a major field of study and research. We need excellent leadership, bold visions, and transforming ideas, and we also need skills that help us achieve those visions and ideas. These topics are part of the concurrent sessions, roundtables, and panels at the conference. In addition, outstanding keynote addresses will be presented by best selling author Karen Armstrong, Timberland CEO Jeff Swartz, and Harvard Professors Rosabeth Moss Kantor and Howard Gardner.

It is most appropriate that we meet in Boston where so much of this country’s history began. Boston continues to be proud of its history while also fostering a climate of innovation and change. You are only a few short blocks from the Freedom Trail, the Bunker Hill Monument, and Paul Revere’s house and a short drive from Lexington and Concord. You also are in one of the world’s leading centers for bio-tech, high-tech, innovation and education. Some 50 college and universities operate in the greater Boston area, and you may want to take some time to visit some of those.

As we convene here in Boston, I look forward to the many leadership experiences, perspectives, and knowledge that will no doubt emerge and be shared as participants at the 2010 conference come from over 40 countries.

The spirit of synergy, transformation, and sharing new visions has been a unique feature at every ILA conference, and we hope that the welcoming spirit of Boston with its important history as well as adaptation to the 21st century will bring new insights to our participants.

Thank you for joining us in Boston, and it is our hope that this conference is a rewarding experience for you.

SHERRY H. PENNEY, 2010 Conference Chair

On behalf of: MAX KLAU, JONATHAN KROLL, CLAIRE REINELT

OUR MISSION

The International Leadership Association (ILA) is the global network for all those who practice, study, and teach leadership. The ILA promotes a deeper understanding of leadership knowledge and practices for the greater good of individuals and communities worldwide.

OUR COMMITMENT

The principal means by which our mission is accomplished is through the synergy that occurs by bringing together public and private sector leaders, scholars, educators, and consultants from many disciplines and many nations.

OUR VALUES

INCLUSION: Nurtures and promotes broad and diverse membership engagement.

INTENT: Encourages nurtures initiatives that advance the field of leadership and contribute to the greater global good.

INTERCONNECTION: Builds upon the shared interests and complementary talents of members to support individual and collective goals.

INTERNATIONAL PERSPECTIVES: Respects cultural contexts and facilitates learning and networking across national boundaries.

INTEGRITY: Insists upon effective and ethical leadership practices and sound scholarship.

ILA STRIVES TO:

Strengthen ties between those who study and those who practice leadership; Serve as a forum where people can share ideas, research, and practices about leadership; Foster effective and ethical leadership in individuals, groups, organizations, and governments in the global community; and Generate and disseminate interdisciplinary research and develop new knowledge and practices.

STRATEGIC PLAN

The ILA Strategic Plan guides the ILA's growth while maintaining a high degree of flexibility to leverage emerging opportunities and the experience and talents of the ILA membership. To invite widespread participation and focus our collective efforts, the ILA Strategic Plan and the companion Strategic Priorities are purposefully broad yet concise. Please join our efforts to:

Cultivate compassion all day and every day. Now, when things are difficult, it’s time to practice.

— Karen Armstrong

Join Karen Armstrong and make compassionate action a dynamic force in your everyday life!

charterforcompassion.org

The Fetzer Institute engages with people around the world to bring the power of love, forgiveness, and compassion to the center of everyday life.

Charter for Compassion

Among our world’s religious and spiritual traditions, author and scholar Karen Armstrong recognizes a shared vision for compassion. Her TED Prize wish—to develop a universal Charter for Compassion—invites all people to imagine a more peaceful world. Since its launch in 2009, people throughout the world have affirmed the Charter and pledged to bring more compassion to their lives, workplaces, schools, and communities. Join this growing project by affirming the Charter.

PRE-CONFERENCE WORKSHOPS AND SPECIAL EVENTS

PRE-CONFERENCE WORKSHOPS BEGIN WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 27 AT 09:00. PLEASE BE SURE TO CHECK IN AT THE ILA REGISTRATION DESK ON TUESDAY BETWEEN 14:00-19:00 OR WEDNESDAY BY 08:30.

PC1: THE HUB OF IDEALISM: EXPLORING BOSTON’S LEADING ROLE IN ADVANCING PUBLIC LEADERSHIP AND SOCIAL INNOVATION

Here in the City where John F. Kennedy was born and a young Martin Luther King, Jr. studied, the unique local spirit of idealism and civic engagement nurtures a critical mass of organizations leading towards an ever-greater involvement in service and social change. Quite simply, there is no other American city that has done more to promote a culture of citizen service across the nation and the world. At this ILA Pre-Conference workshop, participants will learn about Boston’s vital role as a global Hub of Idealism.

This conference event will be hosted by City Year, and based at the City Year Global Headquarters for Idealism, located just two blocks from the Conference Hotel. The Pre-Conference will feature a distinguished panel of Boston’s leaders in the public sector, two breakout sessions focused on the national service movement and developing the next generation of volunteers, and conclude with a guided tour of Boston’s historic sites of public leadership.

PC2: IMMUNITY TO CHANGE: THIS IS LEADERSHIP DEVELOPMENT—A WORKSHOP BY ROBERT KEGAN

The Immunity to Change workshop is based on the groundbreaking work of Robert Kegan & Lisa Lahey and identifies why personal development is so difficult and how to identify and overcome the natural barriers therein. Based on their research in adult development theory, Robert Kegan and Lisa Lahey have developed an innovative teaching methodology and activity called Immunity to Change. This workshop is an awareness-building exercise that makes explicit that which is currently implicit. Immunity to Change helps participants better understand their competing commitments and truly begin to understand the motivation behind behavior and why change, with all of the best intentions, can be so difficult to master.

Amazingly this session provides participants with the opportunity to “investigate, research, study, teach, practice, and implement the theories and strategies” behind Kegan & Lahey’s work.

Robert Kegan will guide participants through the Immunity to Change process, and participants will complete the “Immunity Map” which outlines some of the motivators behind commitments they hold. In the end, the map clearly outlines why certain behaviors do/do not occur, competing commitments held by participants and those “big assumptions” that drive behavior—assumptions that may limit personal change or block true leadership development.

PC3: BUILD, ASSESS, IMPROVE, SUSTAIN—LEADERSHIP EDUCATION PROGRAM GUIDING QUESTIONS AND BEST PRACTICES

This exciting and highly interactive workshop will address the many issues associated with the creation and development of curricular and co-curricular leadership programs on university and college campuses. Participants will identify critical components necessary to design or improve their leadership education program, develop an action plan to acquire needed knowledge and resources, determine priority knowledge and resource needs and will acquire information to address those needs, and build learning networks with other participants and facilitators and will use these networks to increase learning.

Workshop attendees who are new to the field or in the early stages of creating leadership programs will find this workshop of tremendous value, and attendees from leadership education programs undergoing major revisions will discover new insights to advance your current programs. Key experts in each of the five “Guiding Constructs” will help facilitate the Pre-Conference session and then be available throughout the conference to continue ongoing conversations that emerge from the workshop.
SPECIAL EVENTS

ILA CONFERENCE COLLEAGUES & ILA PEER MENTORSHIP PROGRAMS / INITIAL MEETINGS WEDNESDAY, FOLLOWING THE CONFERENCE OPENING.

In its 2nd year as a conference-wide program, Conference Colleagues provides an opportunity for those newer to ILA to connect with those who are more experienced with ILA. Also, for the first time, ILA is launching an organization-wide Peer Mentorship Program. This program is designed to provide ILA members with opportunities to connect and to learn from one another throughout the year.

4TH ANNUAL ILA STUDENT CASE COMPETITION / WEDNESDAY, 18:30 – 19:30 (POSTER SHOWCASE) & FRIDAY, 17:30 – 19:00 (FINAL PRESENTATIONS)

The Case Competition enables undergraduate and graduate student teams to further their development in the leadership field through a two-round competition. The students represent their universities, engage with conference participants to develop a case analysis, and compete for the sought-after title of “ILA Case Competition Winner,” complimentary 1-year ILA memberships, and a $1,000 prize.

LEADERSHIP EDUCATORS EXCHANGE EXPO / THURSDAY, 16:15 – 17:30 & SATURDAY, 12:00 – 13:15

In its inaugural year, the Leadership Educators Exchange Expo will create an open forum where leadership professionals can gather to exchange best practices, generate ideas, and network with other colleagues. See page 51 for the list of college and university leadership programs participating in the Expo.

WOMEN IN LEADERSHIP NETWORKING LUNCHEON / FRIDAY, 12:15-13:15

The ILA Women and Leadership Network (WLN) is a new group created by members to provide information, resources, and networking opportunities for those interested in women and leadership. The WLN welcomes scholars and practitioners who have conducted research related to women in leadership or who are interested in discussing possibilities for future collaborative research around this topic. Participants may be those who are interested in acquiring, researching, and implementing leadership knowledge. This luncheon is the first gathering of the WLN. Tickets are required for this event.

LEADERSHIP EDUCATION PROGRAM DIRECTORS, DEANS, AND CHAIRS LUNCHEON / THURSDAY, 12:15-13:15

The PDDC Community provides a forum for networking and information sharing among this segment of the ILA membership. The annual conference luncheon will be an opportunity to exchange experiences, opportunities, and challenges specific to Leadership Education Program Directors, Deans, and Chairs. Tickets are required for this event.

LEADERSHIP SCHOLARS LUNCHEON FEATURING JOSEPH NYE, LEADERSHIP AND POWER / THURSDAY, 12:15-13:15

Sponsored by the Jepson School of Leadership Studies and hosted by the ILA’s Leadership Scholarship community, this event provides the opportunity to enjoy an academic talk entitled, Leadership in Power, by acclaimed scholar Joseph Nye of the Harvard Kennedy School on his work and research. Tickets are required for this event.

LEADERSHIP IN CONCERT AT THE NEW ENGLAND CONSERVATORY / FRIDAY, 20:00 – 22:00

Over the course of the evening, the audience will experience thoughtful explorations of the connection between music and leadership as well as a collection of moving and powerful performances by Matimba Ya Ripfumelo, Boston’s premier South African music ensemble, the Boston Children’s Chorus, an innovative and boundary-crossing arts education organization, and the Max Klau Band presenting smart, soulful, folk music that rocks.

Tickets are required for this event and are available for purchase at the ILA Registration Desk.

THE INSTITUTE OF INTERNATIONAL EDUCATION
Opening Minds to the World®

The Institute of International Education builds leadership skills and enhances the capacity of individuals and organizations to address local and global challenges.

www.iie.org

A world leader in the exchange of people and ideas for more than 90 years
Initiated in 2008, the Leadership Legacy program honors individuals who have made a significant contribution to the field of leadership throughout the course of their careers. Each recipient of the Lifetime Achievement Award is recognized and paid tribute to at a unique reception at our global conference as well as after the conference via a virtual Legacy Wall. The ILA thanks Larraine Matusak for her leadership in creating this project and the W.K. Kellogg Foundation for its founding sponsorship. We also wish to thank the Randall L. Tobias Center for Leadership Excellence at Indiana University for conducting oral histories with our recipients.
Fred Fiedler

A prolific writer and thinker, this luminary in the field of Industrial and Organizational Psychology is best known for his game-changing 1967 book A Theory of Leadership Effectiveness in which he proposed the contingency model of leadership—the first leadership theory to operationally measure the interaction between a leader’s personality and situational control as a predictor of leadership performance.

Edwin Hollander

One of the first scholars to use the term “followership,” this luminary’s research studied follower expectations and perceptions of leaders, their performance, ethics, and consequences. His well-known model of “idiosyncrasy credit” deals with how followers accord or withdraw support for a leader’s initiatives for change. His latest book, which encompasses all he’s learned throughout his career, puts forward an overarching concept he terms Inclusive Leadership.

Jean Lipman-Blumen

A former Director of the Women’s Research Program at the National Institute of Education, she served as a Special Advisor to the White House’s Domestic Policy staff under President Carter. Her widely acclaimed books include the Pulitzer nominated The Connective Edge; Business Book of the Year Hot Groups; and The Allure of Toxic Leaders, chosen by Fast Company magazine as one of the ten best business books in 2004.

Russell Mawby

During his twenty-five years as CEO of the W.K. Kellogg Foundation, expenditures grew from approximately one million dollars per month to one million dollars per working day—or from $12 to $270 million annually. His leadership in the field of philanthropy is globally known and umbrella organizations, like the Michigan Nonprofit Association that he helped found, are nationally recognized models for effective philanthropy.

WHY THE JEPSON STUDENT STANDS OUT

The Jepson School of Leadership Studies draws upon the liberal arts to educate students for and about leadership to help them become active, thoughtful, and effective participants in their world. Students use multiple lenses to look at leadership as a historical, social, and ethical phenomenon to understand leadership as it was, as it is, and as it should be. With innovative programs and exemplary faculty, the Jepson School has staked its claim at the center of leadership studies.

ILA MEMBER COMMUNITIES

MEMBER INTEREST GROUPS

Member Interest Groups (MIGs) promote the common interests of ILA members in specific areas of the leadership field, facilitate learning and relationships among persons with common interests, and provide opportunities for members to participate actively in the ILA. The groups advise the conference program team, recruit colleagues to submit session proposals, and organize the peer review process to select sessions.

Each MIG will have an information table following the Conference Opening. The MIG business meetings will be held Thursday, October 28 from 17:00 – 18:00; come learn about the many ways that you can participate and increase your involvement in ILA. You need not be an affiliated member of a MIG to attend the MIG business meetings—everyone is welcome.

We encourage you to speak with the current MIG Chair and Chair-Elects regarding elections for the position of MIG Chair-Elect (who will serve as the 2012 MIG Chair), and other volunteer opportunities.

As a benefit of ILA membership, you may formally affiliate with up to three MIGs, by logging into the Member Area of the ILA Web site and following the link to “update your online profile.” MIG members are eligible to participate in the conference proposal review, vote in the annual election, and receive updates from the MIG chair.

Business Leadership Member Interest Group

The MIG for Business Leadership allows individuals involved in leadership initiatives, research, and practice related to the business sector to share ideas, challenges, trends, questions, and/or experiences in this forum. Interest areas include, but are not limited to: international/global issues; talent development; ethics/social responsibility; spirituality; corporate culture/diversity; organizational effectiveness; strategy; virtual/team dynamics; corporate governance; entrepreneurship; industry-specific insights; transformational change; and/or, other emerging inter-disciplinary perspectives on business leadership.

Learning Communities

Learning communities are groups of members who organize around areas of passion, and around questions that are most critical to their work in the field of leadership. These communities are temporary, forming when needed and dissolving when the work has been completed. Face-to-face gatherings are supplemented using technology such as WIKIs and ILASpace.org.

Followership Learning Community

An ongoing community of those interested in research, scholarship, teaching and practices related to followership. In this community, members discover others who share a passion for some aspect of followership studies and form collaborations for specific projects. An active WIKI promotes and distributes the latest research, scholarship, and information.

ILA 2010 Global Conference Proposal Review Process

In order to review all proposal submissions in a manner both comprehensive and fair, the ILA implemented a rigorous review process. Over the course of a two month period, 8-12 individuals reviewed each of the 500 proposals submitted for consideration to the ILA's 12th annual Global Conference.

This process included three phases:

PHASE 1 REVIEW - ILA MEMBER BLIND REVIEW
A call for reviewers was issued in February to all ILA Members to which 350 ILA members answered. Four reviewers were assigned to each proposal submission. These assignments were based on keyword matches that paired a proposal's topic with a reviewer’s expertise, thus allowing for a higher-quality evaluation. All proposal submissions were evaluated by reviewers upon the same scoring rubric. Papers that were submitted to the Scholarship Refereed Paper Track were evaluated upon an additional scoring rubric. Both rubrics were made available on the ILA website throughout the Call for Proposals.

PHASE 2 REVIEW - MEMBER INTEREST GROUP EVALUATION
All proposals were submitted to a primary and secondary Member Interest Group Track under which proposals were reviewed and accepted. Each Member Interest Group provided guidelines to assist individuals who submitted proposals to the ILA Conference, which were made available on the ILA website throughout the Call for Proposals.

The Member Interest Group Chair, Chair-Elect, and Volunteer Member reviewed all proposals that were submitted to their respective track, aided by the scores and evaluations completed in the Phase 1 Review. As each proposal was submitted to two Member Interest Group tracks (primary and secondary), two Member Interest Group teams reviewed each proposal. After review, each Member Interest Group team recommended proposals to be presented at the ILA Conference under their track.

PHASE 3 REVIEW - ILA PROGRAM COMMITTEE
The ILA Program Committee reviewed all recommendations of proposals to be presented at the ILA Conference to confirm that all requirements and guidelines were met and to ensure a balanced, excellent program.
Leadership Legacy Honoree
Fred Fiedler

FRED FIEDLER decided to become a psychologist before he had even entered his teens. Post-World War I Vienna, where Fiedler grew up, was richly flavored by the ideas of Freud, Adler, Jung, and their followers, and the Fiedler household contained many intriguing psychology books for a boy his age. Fourteen years, five thousand miles, and twenty-one jobs later (not counting military service in the U.S. Army), Fiedler completed his PhD in Psychology from the University of Chicago and embarked on a research agenda that would paradigmatically shift how people think about leadership.

For eighteen years, beginning with a 1954 study of the leadership of high school basketball teams—which led to the development of the Least Preferred Coworker (LPC) score—Fiedler poked and prodded the data from his various studies on leadership effectiveness. As Fiedler writes, “A clean and elegant experiment may be a thing of beauty and joy forever, but building a sound theory is more like trying to solve a picture puzzle in which half the pieces are missing ... I am convinced that data are adversaries that have to be beaten into submission ... I have been struck time and again by the realization that I did not really begin to understand some of our research results until many years and studies later. Research to me is more like an archaeological dig than a mathematical game. It takes a lot of shoveling and sifting, at least in the area of leadership, before you really begin to hit pay dirt” (1992 p. 315).

The result of Fiedler’s digging was the game-changing 1967 book A Theory of Leadership Effectiveness in which he proposed the contingency model of leadership—the first leadership theory to operationally measure the interaction between a leader’s personality and situational control as a predictor of leadership performance.

Shortly after its publication, Fielder moved from the University of Illinois to the University of Washington where he is currently Professor Emeritus of Psychology and Professor Emeritus of Management and Organization. A prolific writer and thinker, his achievements have been recognized by numerous associations including the American Psychological Society, the Society for Industrial and Organizational Psychology, and the American Academy of Management.

Karen Armstrong

KAREN ARMSTRONG is one of the most prolific thinkers on the role of religion in the modern world. Armstrong is a former Roman Catholic nun who left a British convent to pursue a degree in modern literature at Oxford. She has written more than twenty books around the ideas of what Islam, Judaism, and Christianity have in common, and around their affect on world events, including A History of God and Holy War: The Crusades and Their Impact on Today’s World and her latest book, The Case for God. Her meditations on personal faith and religion (she refers to herself a freelance monotheist) spark discussion—especially her take on fundamentalism, which she sees in a historical context, as an outgrowth of modern culture.

After a brief stint teaching at the University of London, Armstrong began working on television documentaries and her writing career. Now she says her communion with God occurs in the library, where she spends up to three years researching each of her books, which are densely packed with detail. Her books have been translated into forty languages. Armstrong took part in Bill Moyers’s television series Genesis, and since September 11, 2001, she has been a frequent contributor on both sides of the Atlantic to panels, newspapers, periodicals, and myriad media on the subject of Islam and fundamentalism, advocating multi-faith understanding.

In February 2008, Karen Armstrong won the TED Prize and wished for help in creating, launching, and propagating the Charter for Compassion. The Charter for Compassion is a cooperative effort to restore not only compassionate thinking but, more importantly, compassionate action to the center of religious, moral, and political life. Compassion, as described in the Charter, is the principled determination to put ourselves in the shoes of the other and lies at the heart of all religious and ethical systems. One of the most urgent tasks of our generation is to build a global community where men and women of all races, nations, and ideologies can live together in peace. In our globalized world, everybody has become our neighbor and the Golden Rule has become an urgent necessity.

The Charter, crafted by people all over the world and drafted by a multi-faith, multinational council of thinkers and leaders, seeks to change the conversation so that compassion becomes a key word in public and private discourse, making it clear that any ideology that breeds hatred or contempt—be it religious or secular—has failed the test of our time. It is not simply a statement of principle; it is above all a summons to creative, practical, and sustained action to meet the political, moral, religious, social, and cultural problems of our time.
Guide to Session Formats

CASE STUDY
Presentation of detailed information about a specific, actual, leadership challenge or problem. Individuals analyze the situation from different perspectives, presenting their opinions on how best to solve the problem and inviting audience participation.

CONVERSATIONS WITH AUTHOR
Lecture by or discussion with an author about their recently published leadership book.

INTERACTIVE ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSIONS
Brief presentations followed by facilitated, informal table conversations; a bell will ring half way thru the session allowing attendees to make a smooth transition to a second roundtable. Attendees may visit two roundtable discussions during the conference session devoted to roundtables.

PANEL DISCUSSION
Presentations and/or discussions by two or more people with contrasting or complementary points of view; generally audience participation is encouraged.

PAPER
Formal, traditionally academic, presentation of written product(s) documenting research, presenting theories, or arguing a particular point of view. Papers accepted as a Refereed were subject to a stringent, blind-review selection process.

POSTER
Visual display of a program, paper, or project that will be staffed by the creator(s) Thursday, October 28 from 16:30-17:30.

PRESENTATION
Research, practices, topics, or programs presented by an individual in a more traditional lecture format.

WORKSHOP
Interactive demonstration, application, and/or session that is rooted in audience participation and active learning.

Hints about Choosing Sessions

If you are feeling a bit overwhelmed by the number of choices, please remember to look beyond the session title.

Each submission was reviewed and accepted by one or more ILA Member Interest Group (MIG), which is one indicator of the session’s focus and approach. Also consider session format: two sessions with similar titles but different formats may appeal to two different learning styles.

We provide this information as a guide; please feel free to stretch yourself by attending one or two sessions outside of your normal comfort zone. Of course, all sessions are open to all interested parties; however, if the room is full please attend another session as overcrowded rooms pose a safety hazard.
The Role of Faith—and Interfaith Literacy—in Public Leadership

ARLINGTON / Session Type: PANEL DISCUSSION / Accepted by MIG(s): PUBLIC, SCHOLARSHIP

The questions of leadership are as old as the Scriptures, as the story of Moses’ conversation with God at the burning bush attests. What am I called to do? What is my community called to do? What are we called to do now? The practice of leadership is relational: engaging others to achieve purpose in the face of uncertainty. This panel will explore pedagogies for helping people bring their faith traditions to bear on public-sector challenges and conflicts to produce more durable solutions.

Leading from the Background: The Engaged Leader as Mediator, Peacemaker

BERKELEY / Session Type: PANEL DISCUSSION / Accepted by MIG(s): PUBLIC

Using the scholarship of arts education, creative writing, and visual analogy, the presenters will explain methods to defuse negative emotions and substitute peacemaking paradigms to pave new courses of action for 21st century leaders. They will then lead participants in groups to hone these skills in their own daily encounters.

Peer Coaching: A Structured Approach for Senior Leaders to Address “Swamp Issues”

Clarendon / Session Type: Workshop / Accepted by MIG(s): Business

Swamp issues are described as “tangled, complex problems composed of multiple systems that resist technical analysis” (Parks, 2005). Senior leaders are increasingly confronted with complex organizational issues that defy traditional problem-solving approaches. This presentation and peer coaching fishbowl will describe and model a collaborative approach for leaders to use to address their swamp issues.

LOL: Leadership On-Line—Soft Skill Development in Online Leadership Education

Dartmouth / Session Type: Panel Discussion / Accepted by MIG(s): Education

This panel will provide a rich discussion for leadership professionals (trainers, consultants, and teachers) to share experiences about how to teach the soft skills (e.g., empathy, interpersonal relationships, initiative, resiliency, team building) of leadership via web-based environments. Brief presentations will bridge practical examples and empirical studies of experiences regarding online delivery of leadership education. Panelists and participants will discuss critical questions: What has worked? What did not work? Why? This will provide an opportunity to swap ideas, to wrestle with issues, to learn from each other, and to have a rich dialogue.

A Tale of Two Cities: Developing Student Leadership through International Partnership

HARVARD / Session Type: WORKSHOP / Accepted by MIG(s): EDUCATION

Increased globalization obligates leadership educators to prepare students with a global lens. To meet these challenges, UDEM and UC Berkeley have collaborated to allow students and staff to interact and engage around leadership development topics. This workshop will explore this relationship and provide a blueprint for possible replication by others. The audience will engage in a world café format to explore ideas for developing international partnerships and solutions for current restraints.

Leadership, Distal Teams, and Emergent Work Groups: How to Ensure Functionality of Distal Teams and Foster Self-Organizing Work Groups

SALON H / Session Type: PANEL / Accepted by MIG(s): BUSINESS, DEVELOPMENT

International Teams and Technology

In an era of transnational corporations and distal/virtual teams, leaders are struggling to build team cohesiveness and meet desired goals. This presentation will review the outcomes of a study at Whirlpool and share the training plan developed for Whirlpool executives to increase the success of distal/virtual teams with team members located in Brazil, China, Italy, or Mexico.

* Joanne Barnes  School of Business and Leadership  Indiana Wesleyan University

How to Foster Self-Organizing Work Groups in Organizations

Self-organizing work groups can promote individual leadership development, team cohesion, and smart decision making regardless of the participants’ roles, titles, level of experiences, genders, countries of origin, or fields. The presenter will share her experiences and research on successful self-organizing work groups, including a five-step process.

The Art of Leadership for an Emerging Future
Dialogue #1: Leadership and Imagery

REGIS / Session Type: WORKSHOP / Accepted by MIG(s): DEVELOPMENT

Building on the Fetzer Dialogues of the past two ILA conferences, this year’s dialogues will focus on leadership practices for the years to come—years that promise uncertainty, turbulence, complexity, and necessary collaboration across old divides. Some who study the art of leadership have said that in the final analysis, the most powerful tools that a leader possesses are the power of rich language and the capacity to focus attention. The themes of these dialogues are therefore about language and attention, and the power that comes from the authentic expression of both. All three dialogues will follow a similar format: (1) comments and observations by the presenters, (2) reflections and conversation among small groups of participants about their knowledge/experience/reflections on the theme, and (3) full room dialogue.

The first dialogue will explore the theme of Leadership and Imagery. The ability for leaders at all levels to work with images, to move in the world of imagery, and to harness metaphor in the pursuit of what is true and lasting—all these capacities and practices are at the heart of leadership in a turbulent world. One might say that it is part of what contributes to the presence of the leader and to the leader’s overall effectiveness.

Transforming the Journey: The Hero Archetype and Your Leadership Development

SESSION TYPE: WORKSHOP

The purpose of this workshop is to use the stages of the hero’s journey as a lens for personal leadership development. This session will begin with a brief presentation exploring contemporary archetypal theory to expand a foundational leadership narrative, the hero’s journey, as a transformational tool in an increasingly multicultural world. A three-stage model of personal transformation, which builds the depth of knowledge and insight necessary to effectuate change on a larger scale, will be presented and practiced. The connection between personal and community development for archetypal leadership will be explored as the culmination of the hero’s journey.

Complex Realities: The Birth or Death of Followership in the 21st Century

SESSION TYPE: PANEL DISCUSSION

Followership is dead—or is it? For some, 21st century leadership models demand a greater level of equality among leaders and their collaborators/partners. The term followership is demeaning, disengaging, subordinating, and out of touch with collaborative organizations and the complex realities of today. On the other side strong voices such as Chaleff and Kellerman et al. view leadership and followership as indispensable to each other. Followers must be courageous and empowered because the hierarchy is imbued with all the power. This panel will examine both sides.

New Leadership for Positive and Ethical Organizational Behavior

YARMOUTH  /  Session Type: PAPER PRESENTATION  /  Accepted by MIG(s): SCHOLARSHIP

Both authentic and transformational leadership theories suggest that leaders impact others through positive influence, and these theories have been examined in light of the information shared by the company, by the behavior of followers, and by the corporate responsibility assumed. This session explores corporate behavior through three different lenses—the CEO letter to shareholders, the behavior of financial statement auditors, and a firm’s orientation toward corporate social responsibility (CSR).

Next Generation Leadership: Voices of Emerging Leaders

DARTMOUTH / Session Type: CONVERSATION WITH AUTHOR / Accepted by MIG(s): BUSINESS

Much that is written about leadership comes from scholars on the topic and from established leaders—political figures, present and former CEOs, and others who occupy leadership positions. Often missing from these works are the views of emerging leaders themselves. The authors of Next Generation Leadership (Palgrave/ Macmillan, 2010) will discuss insights gathered from 342 emerging leaders, primarily Generation X, through over eight years of interviews, focus groups, surveys, and individual essays on leadership.

Wisdom at Work: A New Way of Thinking for Business Leaders

FAIRFIELD / Session Type: WORKSHOP / Accepted by MIG(s): BUSINESS

This session will present a model of leadership wisdom with three processes: acquisition, assessment, and action. Participants will engage in a series of interactive exercises to learn several key principles that can lead to more effective and ethical decisions. The fallacies that affect decision making (proposed by Robert Sternberg) will also be explored. Case studies from real-world situations will be used to launch a discussion about how leaders can successfully develop and apply wisdom.

HARVARD / Session Type: PAPER PRESENTATION / Accepted by MIG(s): EDUCATION

While higher education is growing most quickly in traditionally underdeveloped countries, most of the existing information regarding effective management on college and university campuses comes from knowledge that has been generated primarily in North America and Western Europe. This is a potentially troublesome trend if Western models are merely adopted, regardless of suitability, rather than adapted to respond to local needs. This paper describes an approach that has been successfully used to conduct needs assessments that provide an empirical basis for designing and implementing organizational and leadership development initiatives in high-need national contexts.

Emerging Models of Leadership Theory

SALON H / Session Type: PAPER PRESENTATIONS / Accepted by MIG(s): SCHOLARSHIP

Reframing Leadership Studies: Toward a Critical and Reflexive Approach

This paper explores the potential for reframing leadership studies through a focus on social construction, a systems perspective, the interface between theory and practice, a critical perspective, and identity issues. The application of such approaches may challenge embedded assumptions and enhance the impact of theory on leadership practice.

* Richard Bolden  Centre for Leadership Studies, University of Exeter

The Phased Leadership Process Model: A Synthesis of Leadership Theories

Attempts to synthesize leadership theories have largely been reductionist and lack a holistic perspective. Further, few of these syntheses are systems based or recognize that leadership is a staged process. The Phased Leadership Process Model overcomes these weaknesses and presents a model that synthesizes theory within a systems framework.

Developing the Executive Mind: Mastering Emotional Reactions

FAIRFIELD / Session Type: WORKSHOP / Accepted by MIG(s): DEVELOPMENT

Emotional reactivity often invisibly drives destructive behavior and results. The unseen components of an emotional reaction can be changed to create more productive actions and outcomes. This workshop will include an initial exercise, a description and illustration of the reaction map, an opportunity for participants to apply the map on themselves, and discussion. The learning outcomes will be a tool to describe sensitive and highly personalized behaviors (e.g., a reactive emotion) in an objective, depersonalized way. The map also gives strategies and practices for transforming troublesome behaviors in themselves or in coaching clients or associates.

Leveraging Web 2.0 Technologies in Advancing Philanthropic Leadership

Philanthropic leadership is a topic of growing pracademic interest (Barrows, 2004; Helland, 2006; Jue, 2009). Characterized by its compassionate, altruistic, and values-based manifestation and purposes, it is typically regarded as a catalyst for positive social transformation. Yet, operational barriers to effective philanthropic leadership continue to abound. Social media and Web 2.0 technologies may offer promising tools that can assist in closing this gap. This segment will initiate a provocative discussion rooted in methods and emerging case studies whereby innovative uses of internet-based technologies have become powerful tools for furthering the efficacy and impact of global philanthropic leadership.

Worldviews and Leadership: Time for Action

REGIS / Session Type: PANEL DISCUSSION / Accepted by MIG(s): SCHOLARSHIP

This panel will investigate the concept of worldviews for leadership. How extensive is its use and how relevant is it in light of wide diversity? Is it helpful in drawing out larger paradigms that assist in transforming leadership for action as we face the challenges of today and tomorrow?

Worldviews for Action: Understanding the Bigger Picture

A study of various visions of life and ways of life is helpful in assisting with the challenges we face today. Examining worldviews aids in identifying broader paradigms that operate if not compete in the public squares of the world, serving to transform leadership for action.

* John Valk  Renaissance College, University of New Brunswick

An Exploration of the Concept of Worldview within Leadership Studies Literature

The purpose of this study is to explore the concept of worldview within leadership studies literature. Research questions: (1) How is worldview defined? (2) Is worldview addressed within leadership studies literature? How is it addressed and how is it used? (3) What are the implications of worldview within leadership studies?

* Alicia Crumpton  2 Cats Consulting LLC

How Robust Is the Idea of “Worldviews”?

This paper questions the existence of “worldviews.” Yet, if there is such a thing as a worldview, it can be known only through interpretation, which in turn will have been filtered through one’s own worldview. There is doubt whether worldviews actually influence social action, such as leadership. What then follows?

* Nathan Harter  Purdue University

The Worldview and Generational Change

This research examines the concept of worldview through the lens of generational change. It asks the following questions: (1) How is leadership change impacted by generational differences? (2) How are current economic upheavals impacting the young generation? (3) What leadership role will the Millennial Generation play over the next 10-15 years?

Honoring Edwin P. Hollander

WELLESLEY  /  Session Type: PANEL DISCUSSION  /  Accepted by MIG(s): SCHOLARSHIP

Defining Contributions

Colleagues of Edwin P. Hollander will explore with Professor Hollander the defining contributions of his over 50 years of leadership scholarship. They will consider his central concerns with legitimacy, the implications of his work for leadership ethics, and the status of his concept of idiosyncrasy credit. They will outline the importance and significance of Hollander’s work.

* George Goethals  Jepson School of Leadership Studies, University of Richmond
* Terry Price  Jepson School of Leadership Studies, University of Richmond
* Edwin Hollander  CUNY, Baruch College & the Graduate Center

Influencing Scholarship

Ed Hollander has done groundbreaking work on the key role of active followers in leadership, as well as more recently emphasizing the concept of inclusive leadership. His influence has brought balance and breadth to the more traditional leader-centric views that have often dominated the field.

* Lynn Offermann  George Washington University

Idiosyncrasy Credit

One of Ed Hollander’s great talents is his ability to capture phenomena in ways that both clarify them and invite further exploration of what is going on. A case in point is his notion of “idiosyncrasy credit.” This brief presentation will explore why that simple idea has so much power in shaping how we perceive and explain group dynamics.

* J. Richard Hackman  Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University

Pioneering Insight

During the war years at Pensacola, Ed Hollander did pioneering work for the military on followership and, more broadly, began developing key insights about and contributions to our understanding of both leadership and followership. The role of war funding should be understood as part of the unique career of Ed Hollander.

Transcendent Leadership: Expanding the Constructs of Transactional and Transformational?

SALON K / Session Type: PANEL DISCUSSION / Accepted by MIG(s): SCHOLARSHIP

Transcendent leadership is version 2.0 leadership—the refinement of the original. It serves to expand the constructs of transactional and transformational leadership into the 21st century. This panel will explore transcendent leadership across the four disciplines of Psychology, Business, Health Administration, and Human Consciousness, as well as its multifaceted nature and ways of assessing for it.

Transcendent Moments in the Lives of Leaders

Four key findings from an international Delphi study will be presented: leaders experience transcendent moments, these moments impact their leadership, they contain three emergent themes, and three core values. This dynamic presentation will shed light on the implications of these findings on the future of leadership development and social justice.

- Elizabeth Lena Walker  Cornucopia Project

Assessing for Transcendent Leadership

In an increasingly global and complex world with equally complex and tightly coupled systems, the risk of ineffective leadership is a growing concern for organizations. This presentation will explore the psychometric properties of an emergent solution, the Tilt 360 Leadership Predictor. Initial findings regarding the relationship between transcendent leadership, measured by the Tilt 360 LP, and a team level climate for innovation will be presented.

Transcendent Leadership

This presentation will share a new leadership construct, termed transcending leadership (Jordan, 2005), which could expand the existing ‘transactional-transformational’ paradigm (Burns, 1978; Bass, 1985; Bass & Avolio, 1994) and contribute to a richer and deeper understanding of the relationships and responsibilities of leaders and followers.

- David Jordan  Seven Hills Foundation

Transcendent Leadership: Leadership 2.0, an Integral Approach; a Process for the Next Evolution in Leadership Practice

This presentation will ascertain that transcendent leadership is a legitimate construct and is a logical reflection of conscious evolution as evidenced by societal and human development. If transcendence is included in leadership theories, a synergistic, bridging process of honoring the self and the many in spiritual humanism could be possible.

Movement Leadership in a Social Media Age: Stories from the Field

SIMMONS / Session Type: PANEL DISCUSSION / Accepted by MIG(s): PUBLIC

When leaders combine social media tools with elements of traditional organizing methods, including public narrative, they create innovative mass mobilizations. Since 2005, Hunt Alternatives Fund has supported the Prime Movers fellowship program. Prime Movers are social movement leaders whose case studies offer compelling lessons for others seeking to catalyze change. This panel will explore recent stories from of social movement leadership and the lessons on leadership we can learn from these activities.

Learn to Act: Mentoring Research in Leadership Development  POSTER #1
Mentoring contributes to leadership development significantly as protégés learn not only new knowledge and skills but also attitude and vision from their formal and informal mentors. Multiple qualitative studies offer insight into mentoring experienced by male and female executives, entrepreneurs, and managers in business, nonprofit, and technological fields.
* Heewon Chang  Eastern University

Mentoring for Entrepreneurs: Opportunities to Learn and Act  POSTER #2
Entrepreneurs feel the mentoring process not only helped them become successful but also inspired their decision to become entrepreneurs. Utilizing a phenomenological approach, this study explores how leaders in an entrepreneurial environment experience mentoring. By learning through the mentoring experience, the keys to the entrepreneur’s success are established and refined.
* David Ober  PA Outlet Management Co.
* Peter Bemski  Access Services, Inc.

Informal Mentoring of Technological Professionals: Does It Make a Difference?  POSTER #3
The purpose of this phenomenological study was to explore the informal mentoring experiences of technological professionals. All participants conveyed that mentoring had helped them achieve success in their careers. This study suggests that informal leadership mentoring is an important tool that technological professionals utilize to foster career development.
* Julie Rood-Breithaupt  GlaxoSmithKline Pharmaceuticals

Mentoring 2.0: Learning from the Mentoring Experiences of Women Business Leaders  POSTER #4
The positive impact of mentoring on career advancement has been widely reported. The experiences of five women show that relationships are important in effective mentoring, and these experiences influence their approach to mentoring others. To facilitate leadership development for women, leaders need to commit to informal mentoring across the organization.
* Patricia Bleil  McBride and Bennett
The Dynamic Mentor Relationship: The Mentor’s Influence on Female Leaders

POSTER #5

This qualitative study examines the phenomenon of mentoring through the experiences of 12 female leaders from business, academics, and the nonprofit sector. In every case, the mentor experience left a profound impact on the women’s conception of leadership and helped the women act on their experiences to become effective leaders.

* Anibel Cerda-Gazmuri Columbia University

The Two-Way Leadership Mirror: Power and Identity in the Leadership Process

POSTER #7

The pervasive nature of power results in the potential to influence the leadership process in a variety of ways. Focusing on the relationship between power and identity, this paper provides new insight into the way that individuals (including identified leaders) are embedded in larger collectives in which power inherently exists, and offers a new lens through which to explore the impact of power on the leadership process. In so doing, it seeks to illuminate the complex nature of leadership and the approaches necessary for the next generation.

A native Bostonian, JEAN LIPMAN-BLUMEN is a noted organizational sociologist and social psychologist. Her intellectual appetite first flourished at Wellesley where she received her BA and MA. For her PhD she studied at Harvard under such academic stars as Talcott Parsons and Florence Kluckhohn in the Department of Social Relations for Interdisciplinary Social Science Studies.

Her career is a compelling example of what it means to be a scholar for the public good. Not content to work solely in academia, Lipman-Blumen directed the Women’s Research Program at the National Institute of Education, served as a Special Advisor to the White House’s Domestic Policy staff under President Carter, and was President of LBS International, Ltd., a management consulting and public policy firm. Her three best known books are all aimed at improving how we go about the business of leadership and have been widely recognized for their impact. The Connective Edge: Leading in an Interdependent World was nominated for a Pulitzer; Hot Groups: Seeding Them, Feeding Them, and Using Them to Ignite Your Organization won “Business Book of the Year” from the American Publishers’ Association; and The Allure of Toxic Leaders, was chosen by Fast Company Magazine as one of the ten best business books in 2004.

Currently, she is the Thornton F. Bradshaw Chair in Public Policy and Professor of Organizational Behavior at the Peter F. Drucker and Masatoshi Ito Graduate School of Management at the Claremont Graduate University where she is also the co-founding director of the Institute for Advanced Leadership Studies. She has published extensively on leadership, crisis management, public policy, organizational behavior, and gender issues, her most recent book being the co-edited volume The Art of Followership: How Great Followers Create Great Leaders and Organizations. She continues her commitment to work for the public good as president of the Connective Leadership Institute, a leadership, management consulting, and public policy research firm.

Jeff Swartz

JEFF SWARTZ is the third generation of the Swartz family to lead Timberland. His grandfather Nathan started the predecessor company to Timberland in 1952. Jeff’s father Sidney and his uncle Herman launched the Timberland® brand in the early 1970s. Jeff was promoted to President and CEO in 1998, after working in virtually every functional area of the company since 1986. Under Jeff’s leadership, Timberland has grown rapidly from $156 million in 1989 to $1.3 billion in 2009. Timberland today competes in countries around the world, designing, manufacturing, and marketing footwear, apparel, and accessories for men, women, and children.

Today, Jeff leads an organization that believes that doing well and doing good are inextricably linked. Timberland struggles every working day to demonstrate that the business of business is to deliver results for shareholders, employees, customers, suppliers, and consumers worldwide while demonstrating best practices, measurable impact, and sustainable programs. At the center of this commitment to be accountable to all stakeholders is Timberland’s commitment to reduce global warming and preserve the outdoor environment.

In 2006, Timberland introduced an industry-first "nutrition label" on all of its footwear boxes in an effort to provide consumers with greater transparency about the company’s environmental and community footprint. A year later, the company launched its Green Index™ rating system, which provides a measure of the environmental impact of specific products they buy and the company that provides them.

A commitment to active citizenship through initiatives like environmental stewardship, global human rights, and community involvement is not new to Timberland. In 1988, Timberland launched a groundbreaking private/public partnership with City Year, a national youth service organization. Jeff joined City Year’s Board in 1989 and was the national Chair from 1994 until 2003. As a national founding sponsor, Timberland has invested to fuel City Year’s growth and impact. Timberland is City Year’s official outfitter, providing Timberland’s signature yellow boots and a full uniform to the service heroes who work in seventeen sites in America and South Africa.

Recognizing that there was a passion within Timberland for voluntary service, Jeff initiated The Path of Service™ program in 1992. The program gives all Timberland employees forty hours of paid leave each year for community service during the workweek. Service sabbaticals, which provide up to six months of paid time leave for employees to serve in capacity building roles in social justice organizations, is the latest evolution of the Path of Service™ program.

Being accountable to a whole range of stakeholders, from shareholders to community activists, has made Timberland a better company. Timberland appeared on Fortune Magazine’s 100 Best Companies to Work For in America for ten consecutive years and has also been named one of the Best Places to Work by Working Mother magazine. They have been listed on Business Ethics list of 100 Best Corporate Citizens and in 2002, Timberland received the Ron Brown Award, a Presidential award recognizing outstanding corporate leadership in social responsibility.

Jeff received an MBA from Dartmouth in 1984, and a BA in Comparative Literature from Brown in 1982.
CONCURRENT SESSION 4
CS4 FRIDAY, OCT. 29, 10:45 – 12:00

Each submission was reviewed and accepted by one or more ILA Member Interest Groups (MIGs), which along with session format, indicate the session’s focus and approach. All sessions are open to all interested parties; however, if the room is full, please be considerate of those who arrived earlier and attend another session.

A Conversation with Barbara Kellerman

ARLINGTON / Session Type: CONVERSATION WITH AUTHOR / Accepted by MIG(s): SCHOLARSHIP

Barbara Kellerman pioneered in the interdisciplinary study of leadership, including the formation of the ILA. From her edited works to her work on bad leadership and followership, she has made major contributions to the understanding and practice of leadership. The session will take the person off the cover of her books and into the ideas that they have followed through a career of study.

Communicating Leadership Research in a Sound Bite World: The National Leadership Index and the Leadership Crisis in America

FAIRFIELD / Session Type: PANEL DISCUSSION / Accepted by MIG(s): SCHOLARSHIP, PUBLIC

This session, based upon the experience of the Center for Public Leadership at Harvard Kennedy School with its National Leadership Index, will engage conference participants on what drives public confidence in leadership, why public confidence in leadership varies across sectors, and how leadership scholars can inform media coverage of leadership. In the discussion period, the panelists seek to spark a conversation among session participants about forging stronger connections between the study and teaching of better leadership practices and the conduct of public leadership—leadership, across social sectors, for the common good—in an era when confidence in public leadership is low and the need for better leadership is great.

The Leadership Development of Today’s Elected Officials

There is a shared understanding that more effective leadership is needed from elected leaders at the local, state, and federal levels in order to combat the many social and economic challenges of the 21st century. The presenters will share practical leadership development strategies and opportunities relevant to today’s elected leaders.

The Leadership Development of Today’s Elected Officials: Addressing the National Education Crisis

Educating the nation’s 70 million students in elementary, secondary, and postsecondary education is one social challenge that has received much attention. There are clear public expectations that elected officials should and can play a significant role in developing education solutions. However, the reality is that few elected officials have the necessary leadership capacity, governance skills, and understanding of the nation’s school systems needed to develop strategies for accelerating student achievement. This analysis of current leadership development models for elected officials is a starting point for discussing the leadership skills necessary for today’s education policy makers and elected officials.

Deconstructing Leadership: The Role of Context, Personality, and Paradox

In this session, panelists will discuss the effects of self-efficacy, trust, and ethics on women in a male-dominated context; examine the effectiveness of dysfunctional women leaders; and analyze women’s leadership as anchors of TV evening news.

The Effects of Self-efficacy, Trust, and Ethics on Relational Leadership for Women in the Male-Dominated Field of Biomedical Research

Much research exists to describe the relationship between a leader and member and the establishment of in-groups and out-groups. However, work continues to determine how high-quality relationships develop. This research examines the role of self-efficacy, trust, and ethics in developing that exchange, particularly for women in male-dominated fields such as biomedical research.

The Art of Leadership for an Emerging Future

Dialogue #2: Leadership and the Language of Poetry

REGIS / Session Type: WORKSHOP / Accepted by MIG(s): DEVELOPMENT

Building on the Fetzer Dialogues of the past two ILA conferences, this year’s dialogues will focus on leadership practices for the years to come—years that promise uncertainty, turbulence, complexity, and necessary collaboration across old divides. Some who study the art of leadership have said that in the final analysis, the most powerful tools that a leader possesses are the power of rich language and the capacity to focus attention. The themes of these dialogues are therefore about language and attention, and the power that comes from the authentic expression of both. All three dialogues will follow a similar format: (1) comments and observations by the presenters, (2) reflections and conversation among small groups of participants about their knowledge/experience/reflections on the theme, and (3) full room dialogue.

The theme of the second dialogue is: How can poetry serve the work of leadership? The language of poetry combines sparseness and richness, the ability to hold complexity and paradox, and the capacity to point to what matters most. It attunes us to surprise and to mystery. While utilizing poetry in communications is powerful, perhaps an even more important practice to sink into the subtle practices that are imbedded in great poetry—the practices of deep listening, of rich language, of complexity and paradox.

The Philosophy of Action and Ontology of Responsibility

SALON K / Session Type: PANEL DISCUSSION / Accepted by MIG(s): SCHOLARSHIP

Philosophy questions the wisdom of leadership. How do leaders know what actions are wise? This panel will explore how the philosophical stance of leaders conditions the life of organizations and communities. Can philosophy illuminate global issues in ways that lead to wise action?

* The Structure of Being (Ontology) Necessitates a Responsibility toward the Other

  Leadership wishes to serve human authenticity. Philosophy can assist in developing leadership principles that support authenticity. An awareness of ontology can provide guidance for leaders through understanding the complexity of personal and cultural identity. This, in turn, demands an ethics of responsibility for the other.

* Erich Schellhammer
  * School of Peace and Conflict Management, Royal Roads University

* The Philosophy of Action and Ontology of Responsibility

  Those seeking to preserve cultural diversity must preserve the aptitude of responsibility which enables humankind to be not only a consumer and guardian of culture but also, and primarily, its creator. Responsible participation in meaning generation requires understanding interrelationships and is the core of philosophical gnosis and wise action.

* Liubava Moreva
  * St. Petersburg Branch of the Russian Institute for Cultural Research

  Leaders speak of working for the common good. For Levinas and Plato, the good antecedes ontology. Concern for the other human being in his or her absolute and irreplaceable uniqueness must precede dialogue with the Other, and the essences dialogue seeks. Leaders must continually honor this moment before dialogue to keep from trumping ethics, our responsibility to others.

* Moral and Intellectual Solidarity without Borders: Backward into the Future

  UNESCO’s Constitution, adopted in 1945, arose inter alia from the premises that: “a peace based exclusively upon the political and economic arrangements of governments would not (...) secure the unanimous, lasting and sincere support of the peoples of the world.” Peace must be founded on the intellectual and moral solidarity of humanity. Further, “The wide diffusion of culture and the education of humanity” constitute “a sacred duty which all the nations must fulfill.” What do we know about what was, is, and could be meant by “a sacred duty which all nations must fulfill” in light of the timeliness and plausibility of a proposal to promote solidarity among the human species as a whole, regardless of political or economic motivations?

Women and Leadership in Higher Education

WELLESLEY / Session Type: PAPER PRESENTATION / Accepted by MIG(s): EDUCATION

The purpose of this session is to present research findings from four recent studies focused on women and leadership in higher education settings. Presentations include: (1) the impact assessment of a 10-year initiative, (2) a background characteristics conceptual model, (3) a narrative study of women leading, and (4) the role of women’s colleges in developing leaders.

The Influence of Background Characteristics on the Lifetime Development of Leadership for Women: A Conceptual Model

The purpose of this presentation is to offer a theoretical and conceptual model that provides educators and researchers a tool to explore the early experiences of women in developing leadership. This model considers the importance of background characteristics of students in developing more effective leadership programs and strategies for women.

Leading in Virtual Environments

YARMOUTH / Session Type: PAPER PRESENTATION / Accepted by MIG(s): SCHOLARSHIP

The art and practice of leadership has spread swiftly to virtual environments. There exists a wealth of research on the effects of traits, behaviors, styles, and approaches of leaders on various outcomes in face-to-face settings. In this session, three studies will be presented that examine aspects of such relationships in virtual contexts.

The Value of Collaborative Leadership: Leadership Approach and Leader Emergence in Virtual Work Groups

Virtual group work is proliferating, making an understanding of leadership in virtual contexts imperative. This study was conducted to determine the approaches to leadership taken by emergent leaders during highly anonymous, virtual group work. Results indicate that both collaborative and leader-centric approaches affect perceptions of leader emergence.

* S. Lynn Shollen  Cameron University (refereed track)

Leader Emergence in Virtual Work Groups: An Application of Trait Theory in a Virtual Context

This study investigates whether individuals who tend to emerge as leaders within virtual work groups exhibit consistent dispositional traits. The results obtained suggest that personality and cognitive ability are not associated with leader emergence within virtual contexts. The findings imply that the application of trait theory is problematic within virtual environments.

Leadership 2.0 through Web 2.0

Social media has, it is claimed, changed the possibilities of modern leadership. The aim of this paper is to investigate how interaction in social media can influence how leadership is constituted and communicated. What happens when a leader blogs and uses this to present “small talk”?

* Lena Lid Andersson  Stockholm School of Economics
EDWIN HOLLANDER has always been someone interested in making a difference. “I came into psychology with a desire to help improve the human condition on a larger scale than I thought was possible aiding individuals one by one …. In teaching for over fifty years and writing a textbook on social psychology … I found major fulfillment … [and] I more than attained my early hope of reaching a larger part of humanity and, perhaps, making a difference” (ILA Member Connector Newsletter, Oct. 2008).

Working on his Master’s and PhD at Columbia University in the early 1950s, Hollander was intrigued by the changing field of leadership. New thinking and research were occurring and, his interest piqued, he read extensively in the field. Broad theoretical thinking combined with a passion for measurement is the hallmark of his career. Intrigued by questions about effective leadership, his work has provided a sturdy base from which leadership development has been guided.

Hollander’s major works have focused on group and organizational leadership and innovation. His research studies follower expectations and perceptions of leaders, their performance, ethics, and consequences. His model of “idiosyncrasy credit” deals with how followers accord or withdraw support for a leader’s initiatives for change. He has always been interested in the Leader-Follower relationship as demonstrated by an early—both for him and the field—publication titled, “Leadership, Followership, and Friendship: An Analysis of Peer Nominations,” which he co-authored with Wilse B. Webb in 1955. His latest book, which encompasses all he’s learned throughout his career, puts forward an overarching concept he terms Inclusive Leadership.

Hollander is currently Emeritus Distinguished Professor of Psychology at Baruch College, City University of New York where he plays an active role in student research and continues his journey of making a difference.
The Rise of Women as Leaders: Progress and Continuing Barriers

ARLINGTON / Session Type: PANEL DISCUSSION / Accepted by MIG(s): SCHOLARSHIP

Substantial social change has given contemporary women more of the human capital needed to advance to executive roles in organizations. However, impediments to women as leaders still exist in terms of stereotypical beliefs that women do not and should not have the agentic attributes ordinarily ascribed to leaders. Founding CEO’s Core Self-Evaluations and New Venture Performance: A Longitudinal Multilevel Analysis (Kenneth E. Clark Student Research Award Presentation)

BRANDEIS / Session Type: PAPER PRESENTATION / Accepted by MIG(s): SCHOLARSHIP

Drawing on longitudinal multilevel data, this study conceptualized and tested a mediated moderation model that integrates a founding CEO’s disposition (i.e., core self-evaluations), his or her top management team (TMT)’s motivational state (i.e., efficacy), environmental intervention factors (i.e., event criticality and novelty) as well as new venture performance (i.e., monthly sales) at different time points. It was found that over time TMT efficacy plays a mediating role in linking the interactions of a founding CEO’s CSE with event criticality and event novelty to new venture performance. These results raise important issues for both theory and practice.

Art-Infused Leadership

SUFFOLK / Session Type: WORKSHOP / Accepted by MIG(s): DEVELOPMENT

To resolve issues such as global climate change, terrorism, economic instability, and poverty requires concerted collective action and new ways of seeing and responding. Using a question previously explored by artists, we will use the Open Question Segue™ process to engage participants in reflecting on the practice of leadership. After participants have completed the Segue and the artists’ responses to the question are shared, themes and commonalities between art and leadership will be discussed.

Leadership and Uncertainty: Three Research Perspectives

Leadership for an Uncertain Future

This concept essay introduces the underlying premises of futures studies and argues that futures thinking yields meaningful contributions to leaders, leadership scholars, and educators. While neglected by leadership theorists, futures research is more than a management fad but rather offers fresh perspectives for understanding challenges.

Leading Laterally: Skills for Partnering and Collaborating

Leading Laterally: Skills for Partnering and Collaborating

This session will use a series of engaging exercises to explore the different mind-sets and skill sets required for leading in today’s environment of collaboration and partnerships, and the shift in paradigm from positional to nonpositional leadership. The session will be relevant to both practicing leaders seeking to improve their skills at leading collaboratively, as well as leadership developers and educators who wish to explore ways to help leaders become more successful.

Models of/for Compassionate, Empathic, and Creative Leadership

This session will explore a number of theory-based conceptual and practical models for leadership in a variety of contexts and communities while addressing questions such as: What might a well-considered developmental view of authentic altruism look like for leaders and leader developers? What might be said about the implications for leadership when we consider the theories of empathy together with extant theories of leadership? What might be learned about creative leadership by paying attention to innovations undertaken in North America and Africa by leaders in selected faith communities?

The Compassionate Leader

This paper introduces a substantive and conceptually nuanced account of altruism, its development and its relevance to the challenge of understanding and promoting authentic moral leadership. A developmental Model of Authentic Compassionate Leadership will be presented.

Empathic Leadership: Strengthening the Leader-Follower Bond in the Midst of Constant Change

Empathy is a key leadership attribute. A leader can strengthen the bond with a follower by first being empathetic and then communicating that empathy. A conceptual model will be presented that combines theories of empathy with models and theories of leadership to address gaps in leadership theory and research.

Leading Across Difference: Lessons Learned from Across the World

This session provides findings from two studies on leadership across difference and a 2009 survey of senior executives. The first presentation, based on the international cross-cultural LAd project, will introduce a framework addressing social identity differences in organizations, and common triggers of social identity conflict in organizations. This is grounded in data from 2,803 surveys and 239 interviews, collected from 11 countries across 5 continents. The second presentation will focus on the challenges experienced by senior executives as they lead across differences. This is grounded in a survey of 128 senior executives. The third presentation will introduce a three-phase boundary spanning leadership approach to leading effectively across differences, based on interview data gathered as part of the LAD project.

The ILA is pleased to partner with the Center for Creative Leadership (CCL) on the Kenneth E. Clark Student Research Award. CCL is a top-ranked, global provider of executive education. Founded in 1970 as a nonprofit, CCL helps clients around the world to cultivate creative leadership—the capacity to achieve more than imagined by thinking and acting beyond boundaries. The award is named in honor of the distinguished scholar and former Chief Executive Officer of CCL and recognizes outstanding unpublished student papers on leadership or leadership development. The Call for Submissions for the 2011 Kenneth E. Clark Award will be available online in early 2011. Please visit www.ila-net.org/awards for more information.
2ND ANNUAL EMERGING SCHOLARS RESEARCH CONSORTIUM

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 29 / 16:15 - 17:30
SALON A - D

The consortium is a valuable chance to engage in meaningful dialogue around the latest scholarship and research by new contributors to the field of leadership studies. It is an opportunity for master’s and doctoral students as well as junior leadership scholars to present current research and receive feedback from senior scholars and practitioners at the conference. Junior and senior leadership scholars can interact, foster collaboration, meet potential co-authors, while universities can identify potential faculty, and publishers can find future authors and contributors.

INTERACTIVE ROUNDTABLE SESSION

FRIDAY, OCT. 29, 16:30 – 17:45
GRAND BALLROOM

The Interactive Roundtable Discussions are designed to facilitate high levels of interaction and engagement by utilizing dialogue between the discussant(s) and attendees. There will be two discussion rounds, and a bell will sound approximately 35 minutes into the session to signal that it is time to move to another table if you wish. Of course, you may opt to leave sooner or stay longer.

How Inclusive Leadership and Idiosyncrasy Credit Facilitate Effective Leader-Follower Relations

Inclusive Leadership (IL) begins with the truth that there is no leadership without followership, emphasizing “doing things with people, rather than to people,” with followers deserving good leadership. Accordingly, IL’s four Rs are Respect, Recognition, Responsiveness, and Responsibility, both ways, contributing to Trust and Loyalty (Hollander, 2009). Recognition of followers perceiving leader attributes sees them giving credit to a leader believed to “belong” and performing well. Gaining “idiosyncrasy credits” (IC) accounts for a leader’s emergence and added actions beyond legitimacy of authority (Hollander, 1958, 1964, 1978). Allowing followers such “upward influence” augments and enriches transforming and other leadership practices.

The Role of Transformational Experience in the Development of Transformational Leadership Capacity

This paper presents a framework for considering transformational leadership through the lens of transformational learning theory (Cranton, 1994, 2006; Mezirow, 1991, 2000; Taylor, 1998, 2006, 2007) and grounding that framework in research on transformational experience. It details findings from a research project concerning transformational experience and leadership development.

Exploring the Integration of an Emotional Intelligence and Servant Leadership Mind-set as a Model for Effective Leadership Practice

TABLE 4

This session will address recent philosophies of blending EI and servant leadership in order to form a mind-set for leading today’s organizations successfully with enhanced, high valuing, high performing, and highly ethical organizations as a result. A two-dimensional, four-quadrant model of leadership will be presented and the rationale for component constructs will be considered for a potentially new leadership mind-set for multinational organizations.

Using Assessment Centers to Identify High-Potential Employees for Succession Management in the Public Sector

TABLE 5

Many government organizations are facing a leadership crisis: young leaders are often underdeveloped and unready for executive responsibilities and mature leaders are approaching retirement age. This discussion will explore succession management; outline the challenges of implementing it in the public sector; and describe one method of overcoming these challenges by using assessment centers to inform the process, identify high-potential future leaders, and target their developmental opportunities.

Public Leadership and Encouraging Citizen Self-Leadership

TABLE 7

One of the public leader’s goals of maintaining republican principles occurs through encouraging self-leadership among its citizens. More often than not, however, public policy reinforces dependence rather than independence. This session will explore ways leaders might instead encourage self-leadership virtues of individual initiative, responsibility, charity, foresight, etc., through its policies.

Women and Leadership

TABLE 19

The purpose of this session is to present findings from recent studies on women and leadership. Papers include: (1) Norwegian women's experiences on corporate boards, (2) gendered/positional perceptions of women's leadership qualities, (3) impact of executive coaching on female executives, and (4) gendered aspects of leadership as experienced by women.

Women and Leadership: Exploring Norway’s Experience of the “Golden Skirt Rule”

Norway has more women on their male dominated boards than any other country in the world due to the “Golden Skirt Rule.” This phenomenological study describes experiences of Norwegian female board members who report of their learnings. These women reported successes and frustrations as a result of these isolating experiences.

Navigating the Labyrinth: A Study of Gendered and Positional Perceptions of Ideal Leadership Qualities in Faith-Based Higher Education

This research explored perceptions of qualities that contribute to senior-level leaders being viewed as “ideal” in the context of faith-based higher education. No social-cognitive explanation for prejudice was found to exist toward women in leadership. Transformational and relational leadership styles were the desired models of leadership for the respondents.

* Shawna L. Lafreniere  Azusa Pacific University

Beyond Mentoring: The Impact of Executive Coaching on the Organizational Performance of Female Executives

Competition for senior leadership is fierce. Successful companies are those which leverage their entire talent pool to its fullest potential. Women are the critical element for that success. This presentation will demonstrate justification for the development and promotion of the female executive, and will provide evidence of the efficacy of executive coaching.

Leadership and Culture

This session examines dimensions of culture and leadership obfuscated by the common emphasis on multinational cultural differences. The papers are all part of extensive study about expatriates working abroad, bridging professional and local community cultures, and the role of culture in reconstructing New Orleans after Katrina.

Culture and Leadership: Expatriates in Professional Roles
Many professionals in overseas postings fail. Research indicates failure to adjust to the host-culture environment contributes to a lack of success. When expatriate leaders fail the financial, relational, and political ramifications can be dire. Reciprocal coaching dyads of an expatriate and a host country national may promote successful adjustment.

Lessons in Liminality: Teaching Leadership to Undergraduate Students

TABLE 30
In many ways, the role of the teacher is to disrupt students’ assumptions about the purpose of studying leadership, and to get them to reflect critically. This paper applies Turner’s concept of liminality to the learning processes undergone by undergraduate students of leadership studies, suggesting that students occupy a liminal space, and must engage with symbolic ‘monsters,’ like theory or critical thinking. It argues that leadership educators must build bridges to help students grapple with such monsters and cross liminal divides.

Fredric M. Jablin Dissertation Award

2010 Winner: Congratulations Dr. YoungHee (Sylvia) Hur
University of Twente, School of Management and Governance
“Optimizing Managerial Effectiveness Through Emotional Intelligence”

Honorable Mentions:
Dr. Lena Lid Anderson, Stockholm School of Economics, “Leader-Shaping Rhetoric.”

Submissions for the 2011 Fredric M. Jablin Dissertation Award may be on any topic and from any discipline as long as they make a substantial and direct contribution to the study of leadership. The dissertation must be completed between August 1, 2009 and August 1, 2011. The 2011 recipient(s) will be honored at the annual conference of the International Leadership Association, October 26-29 in London, where they will be asked to present their dissertation research. In addition to the award, winners receive a $1000 cash prize from the Jepson School of Leadership Studies, travel expenses to and registration for the ILA conference, and a one year membership to the ILA. All submissions must be received by August 1, 2011. Applicants must submit a letter of interest, a 3-5 page abstract of a substantive dissertation chapter (specifically, the chapter that best represents the dissertation), a brief biography, and verification of the dissertation defense date (e.g., a letter from the dissertation advisor). Candidates should e-mail submissions as attachments to jepsonaward@richmond.edu. Please do NOT send the dissertation. The award committee will contact semi-finalists to request a full dissertation chapter. Please visit www ila-net org/awards for more information.
Russell Mawby’s interest in rural community development is rooted in his youth working on a family farm in Michigan. The first member of his family to earn a Bachelor’s degree, he went on to obtain a PhD in Agricultural Economics from Michigan State University where he was also Assistant Director of Extension. Responsible for 4-H Clubs and Youth programs in Michigan early in his career, he purposefully emphasized leadership training and the development of junior and adult leaders in the programs. The combination of these two interests made Mawby a natural fit for the W.K. Kellogg Foundation. He joined the Foundation as Director of the Division of Agriculture in 1964 where he developed the Michigan Agricultural Leadership Program. Mawby quickly advanced at Kellogg and was named President and CEO in 1970.

Mawby was an extraordinary leader of the Foundation and steward of the vision and values of W.K. Kellogg, its founder. During the twenty-five years that he served as CEO expenditures grew from approximately one million dollars per month, to one million dollars per working day (or from $12 to $270 million annually). Keeping true to Mr. Kellogg’s priorities and educational pragmatism, Mawby steered the Foundation’s programming toward leadership, philanthropy & volunteerism, and minority populations while maintaining topical foci of health, agriculture, and education. His leadership in the field of philanthropy is globally known and umbrella organizations, like the Michigan Nonprofit Association that he helped found, are nationally recognized models for effective philanthropy. Retired in 1995, Mawby’s lasting legacy is not only the thousands of lives that he touched directly as a leader, but the hundreds of thousands he touched by supporting the work and development of the next generations of leaders through initiatives like the Kellogg National Fellowship Program, support for the inclusion of leadership skills in college curricula, and the creation of Kellogg College at Oxford University.
Rosabeth Moss Kanter

Rosabeth Moss Kanter holds the Ernest L. Arbuckle Professorship at Harvard Business School, where she specializes in strategy, innovation, and leadership for change. She is also the Chair and Director of the Advanced Leadership Initiative of Harvard University, a collaboration across the professional schools to help successful leaders at the top of their professions address challenging national and global problems.

Her strategic and practical insights have guided leaders of large and small organizations worldwide for over 25 years, through teaching, writing, and direct consultation to major corporations and governments. Professor Kanter has been repeatedly named to lists of the “50 most powerful women in the world” (Times of London), and the “50 most influential business thinkers in the world” (Accenture and Thinkers 50 research).

She has received 23 honorary doctoral degrees. Before joining the Harvard Business School faculty, she held tenured professorships at Yale University and Brandeis University, and was a Fellow at Harvard Law School, simultaneously holding a Guggenheim Fellowship. In 2001, she received the Academy of Management’s Distinguished Career Award. She was named “Intelligent Community Visionary of the Year” in 2002 by the World Teleport Association, and in 2010 received the International Leadership Award from the Association of Leadership Professionals.

Through Goodmeasure Inc., the consulting group she co-founded, she has partnered with IBM on applying her leadership tools from business to other sectors; she is a Senior Advisor for IBM’s Global Citizenship portfolio. She advises CEOs of large and small companies, has served on numerous business and non-profit boards including City Year, the urban “Peace Corps” now focused on addressing the school dropout crisis, and national or regional commissions including the Governor’s Council of Economic Advisors. She speaks widely, often sharing the platform with Presidents, Prime Ministers, and CEOs at national and international events, such as the World Economic Forum in Davos, Switzerland.

The former Editor of Harvard Business Review (1989-1992), she is the author or co-author of 18 books. Her latest book, SuperCorp: How Vanguard Companies Create Innovation, Profits, Growth, and Social Good, a manifesto for leadership of sustainable enterprises, was named one of the ten best business books of 2009 by Amazon.com. Confidence: How Winning Streaks & Losing Streaks Begin & End (a New York Times business and #1 Business Week bestseller), describes the culture and dynamics of high-performance organizations as compared with those in decline, and shows how to lead turnarounds, whether in businesses, hospitals, schools, sports teams, community organizations, or countries.

Assessment 2.0: Assessment Challenges and Opportunities

ARLINGTON / Session Type: WORKSHOP / Accepted by MIG(s): EDUCATION

How can we push our assessment programs to be exercises in leadership and innovation? What have we learned through assessment about ourselves, our programs, and our students that teach us about leadership? What can we do as communities of educators to create new assessment practices that will not only “justify our existences” in the academy but manifest the very leadership principles we hope to teach? These questions and others will shape this interactive workshop on assessment practices.

Youth Leadership for Transformation: Guiding Young People through the Inner Work of Leadership Development

PROVINCE TOWN / Session Type: PANEL DISCUSSION / Accepted by MIG(s): DEVELOPMENT

While many focus on youth leadership development, there is relatively little available in the way of consolidated and/or documented knowledge about best practice in engaging and supporting youth in the inner work of leadership development. This panel will focus various approaches to facilitating leadership development in adolescent youth and young adults by sharing their expertise in leadership development, service learning, civic engagement, and mentoring on outcomes such as reduced risk behaviors, identity development, spiritual development, and enhanced social support for youth. The development and implementation of existing programs will be discussed, including evaluation data on program impact.

Emergent Leadership: Theory and Practice for a Connected World

SALON J / Session Type: PANEL DISCUSSION / Accepted by MIG(s): SCHOLARSHIP, DEVELOPMENT

Drawing on previous research and writing about Authentic Leadership, Self-Organizing Systems, and Imaginative Leadership from a variety of sources, a case is made for expanding the definitions of what it means to lead, organize, and relate, creating emergent leadership paradigms compatible with a highly connected 21st century world.

Authentic Leadership Redefined: A Paradigm for Evolution

This presentation looks at authentic leadership, redefining the concept and practice to require much deeper levels of self-knowledge than ever before, matching authenticity more closely with the demands of a connected world. Personal reflection, mentorship, and the redesign of leadership development programs will be discussed as supportive of this redefined paradigm.

* Jeffrey Zacko-Smith State University of New York College at Buffalo

Witnessing Leaders Emerge from Within: The Impacts of Self-Organizing Work Groups

Self-organizing work groups can have significant impacts within organizations, including fostering greater personal and organizational awareness and confidence, and bringing forth organizational leaders. The presenter will discuss exactly what these groups are and outline research results, including impacts these groups can have and the theory that effective leaders are groups, not individuals.

* Lori Kane The Collective Self, LLC

Authentic Leadership as Opening Space

This presentation examines the implications for leadership of authenticity as quality of presence. A view of spiritual beings having human experiences, and authenticity as integrity of soul, mind, emotions, and body, leads to the concept of leadership as opening space.

When Theory Chases Practice: New Models of Leadership

New modes and models of leadership practice press the boundaries of our theoretical frameworks. This panel addresses three of those modes and models—the internet, social entrepreneurship, and invisible leadership—and their theoretical implications.

Leadership within Diffuse Networks

Diffuse Networks afford nonprofits, government, businesses, and civic-minded people daily access to data and reports, organizations, information, and each other to create opportunities for civic action. The paper relates the work of ConnectNetwork and others to the current theoretical work based on complexity theory and the nature of leadership, without a particular leader, in a complex adaptive system.

Through the lenses of constructive-developmental theory and action inquiry, this paper assesses the complexity of the ways of knowing of 10 social entrepreneurs and discusses the perspective-shifting moments that led to their engagement with social entrepreneurial actions.

* Kathleen Roberts  Idaho State University

Invisible Leadership

Gill Hickman and Georgia Sorenson, who have written and discussed invisible leadership for many years, proposed two questions to former Kellogg National Leadership Fellows: “Can leadership be invisible?” “How and why have you practiced invisible leadership?” This paper analyzes the responses of 40 of the Fellows to provide valuable insight into how invisible leadership is perceived and practiced.

The Future of Religious Leadership

Although there are resonances between and among political, business, and religious leadership, various components—e.g., leader and follower roles and interaction, motivation, communication, and vision—take on distinctive meanings in religious contexts. Further, other components—e.g., ritual and community-building—while also prominent in other contexts, are critical in religious leadership.

Leadership for What? When Peace Is the Primary Answer

To address Leadership 2.0, this panel shifts the basic question in leadership scholarship to the fundamental purpose of leadership by asking, “Leadership for what?” The panel will focus on a fundamental response, “Leadership for peace,” since without peace we cannot address the pivotal societal issues of poverty, famine, health, education, and the environment.

Peace, Justice, and Our Children’s Future

Martin Luther King, Jr., believed that peace was the presence of justice, and essential to this quest was finding an alternative to war. War depletes our resources, diminishes our humanity, and destroys our capacity for building world community. As leaders, we can find new pathways to peace. Are not the safety and prosperity of our children and the creation of a peaceful future the very essence and purpose of leadership?

* Juana Bordas  Mestiza Leadership International

Resistance Leadership: Leading Toward Peace

Mainstream leadership theory tends to emphasize leadership as a process that is asymmetrical and unidirectional. In the rush to set goal accomplishment as the primary end of leadership, leadership theory has all too often neglected the moral purpose of leading. Consequently, “leadership for what?” remains ill defined. This paper posits that peace is the purpose of leadership and is primarily achieved through resistance.

Dialogue #3: Leadership and the Power of Narrative

REGIS / Session Type: WORKSHOP / Accepted by MIG(s): DEVELOPMENT

Building on the Fetzer Dialogues of the past two ILA conferences, this year’s dialogues will focus on leadership practices for the years to come—years that promise uncertainty, turbulence, complexity, and necessary collaboration across old divides. Some who study the art of leadership have said that in the final analysis, the most powerful tools that a leader possesses are the power of rich language and the capacity to focus attention. The themes of these dialogues are therefore about language and attention, and the power that comes from the authentic expression of both. All three dialogues will follow a similar format: (1) comments and observations by the presenters, (2) reflections and conversation among small groups of participants about their knowledge/experience/reflections on the theme, and (3) full room dialogue.

The theme of the third dialogue is leadership and the power of narrative in service of the greater good. What is the power of a story that remains alive and vital over time, a story that demands attention and action? What are the stories that remind us who we are, and what we are about? And what is the role of such story in our leadership work? As leaders, how do we develop an ear for story, and a gift with story?

The Future of Leadership Theory and Practice of Latin American Leadership

HARVARD / Session Type: PAPER PRESENTATION / Accepted by MIG(s): SCHOLARSHIP

This panel proposes new approaches to study leadership models and practices in Latin America, new models to understand Latin American leadership by paying attention to culture’s hidden language, and a fresh integrative approach to study Latinos’ leadership in America.

From Description to Understanding: The Future of Latin American Research
Leadership research in Latin America has been dominated during the last 40 years by descriptive models of research. This presentation will discuss the need of new theoretical models to study leadership concepts and practices that go from description to understanding of the leadership phenomenon in Latin America and will present recommendations to attain that goal.

* Sergio Matviuk  School of Global Leadership and Entrepreneurship

Toward a New Integrative Model to Study U.S. Latino Leadership
The growth of the Latino population in the U.S. demands adequate models to study how they understand and practice leadership. Optimizing Managerial Effectiveness Through Emotional Intelligence
(Fredric M. Jablin Dissertation Award Presentation)
BRANDEIS / Session Type: PAPER PRESENTATION / Accepted by MIG(s): SCHOLARSHIP

The emotional intelligence of leaders has emerged as a critical component in the ability to lead a work unit effectively. However, there has been a lack of empirical investigations into the mechanism by which an emotionally intelligent manager leads so as to enhance work-unit level outcomes. This dissertation substantiates the relative importance of managers’ emotional intelligence to optimize managerial effectiveness at the collective level. Based on a quantitative type research design, a number of hypotheses about emotional intelligence were examined in actual organizations of different sizes and in different industries (i.e., public-sector, banking, and retail sector). In an effort to optimize the value of the results, data collection and research methods were implemented with rigor: large sample sizes; high response rates; use of various dependent variables; controlling for same source bias.

Leadership 2.0 in Action: Building a National Leadership Capabilities Framework for the Health Sector in Canada

The session will explore a Pan-Canadian leadership initiative to effect sweeping systemic changes in the Canadian health sector. Intended to foster a culture of leadership, the object of this effort was to support the implementation of changes in health service delivery that meet the needs of the public. The case study will first outline the two stages employed in developing a framework with a solid conceptual and evidentiary base; processes employed to gain endorsement of the standards of leadership by numerous provincial and national entities; how it is being used as a conceptual model to stimulate health reform; and finally, how it is being used to develop leadership at the front-line, middle manager, senior, and executive leadership level in support of meaningful health reform in Canada.

Maximize the Power of Teamwork—Even When Team Members Are Worlds Apart

Yael Zofi AIM Strategies

Globalization and advanced technology have propelled virtual teams (VTs) front and center in the workplace. The fundamental challenge is how to create effective work relationships and develop trust across cultures without the benefit of face-to-face contact. Drawing from over 20 years of consulting and coaching global teams, as well as 150+ interviews, the presenter will share trends and conclusions about leading effective VTs with a special focus on cross-cultural communications. In this interactive session, participants will learn surefire techniques that are key to successful team setup or to refreshing an existing virtual team.

Leadership Issues in Conflict

Military Leadership: Always in Action

The presentation will evaluate civil-military partnerships in solving global crises and conflict. The intent is to examine the nature and impact of destructive toxic military leadership and civil-military partnerships to gain some insights about the scope and nature of the military population. The role of military leadership is increasingly important in developing effective global security policy, and in contending with conflict and crisis management.

Transforming Hierarchical Relationships into Productive Partnerships: Leaders and Followers in a Networked World

PROVINCETOWN / Session Type: CONVERSATION WITH AUTHOR / Accepted by MIG(s): BUSINESS

In a networked world, the power of followers is both diminished and paradoxically magnified. From a Leadership 2.0 perspective, both leaders and followers need to understand these dynamics and convert the cynicism that they can breed. The author will focus discussion on a new chapter in the third edition of The Courageous Follower: Standing Up To and For Our Leaders (Berrett-Koehler, 2009). “The Courage to Speak to the Hierarchy,” offers insights and strategies to those who play a role improving organization dynamics from virtually any place within a hierarchy.

Transformational Leadership and the Powers of Place

REGIS / Session Type: WORKSHOP / Accepted by MIG(s): DEVELOPMENT

This workshop will focus on a component of leadership theory and practice that has been largely overlooked—the role of place, space and environment on transformative leadership. In a time when strategy, skills, and other personal qualities of leadership are not enough to inspire the kind of creativity and innovation required to revitalize organizations and communities, leaders must be able to tap into all available resources to effect truly transformative change. The workshop will include presentation and active learning through reflection and generative dialogue.

Servant Leadership in All Places: Turning Around Jail Health

SALON H / Session Type: CASE STUDY / Accepted by MIG(s): PUBLIC

This case study exemplifies how servant leadership produced positive results in the seventh largest jail system in the United States. Presenters will represent the diverse team—including the Federal Department of Justice, the County Judge, the Sheriff of Dallas County, and the medical provider—that worked together to solve years of neglect and disrepair of the jail system.

Getting Started in Publishing: A How-to Session

SUFTOLK / Session Type: PANEL DISCUSSION / Accepted by MIG(s): EDUCATION

The path to publication can be daunting for both seasoned scholars and junior scholars alike. The focus of this session is to help graduate students and new doctoral graduates with insights into how to build their publication portfolio. Three representatives of the leadership journals Leadership Quarterly, Leadership, and the Journal of Leadership Studies will explore the tricks of the trade and offer their own suggestions on finding ways to publish leadership research.

Lessons in Leadership from Parents and Parenting Theory

Everything We Know about Leadership We Learned from Our Parents

The growing body of research on the expectations, behaviors, and outcomes of leadership has revealed a number of parallels between the leader/follower and parent/child relationship. This paper advances a theoretical argument suggesting the need for a leadership model based upon the parenting strategies that develop secure and well-adjusted children into functioning and productive adults.

I Know WE Can Do It; I Just Don’t Know if THEY Will Listen

This paper uses data gathered through journals, observations, and focus groups to discuss young mothers' sense of leader and collective efficacy during their engagement in an activism-informed, participatory, policy-making research project designed to address young mothers' experiences with child protection and access to appropriate housing.

Developing Leadership that Rebuilds Postconflict Societies

Transforming Local Leadership to Develop Communities for the Future in Postconflict Sierra Leone

After Sierra Leone’s brutal civil war, communities have worked to develop through the transformation of local traditional leadership practices and the creation of new inclusive leadership practices. This presentation will discuss these shifts and how lessons learned in local leadership could be applied to other communities aiming to develop after conflict.

Use of Participatory Visual Methodologies with Gender Analysis to Unleash Rural Women’s and Girls’ Leadership Capacities in Rwanda

After Rwanda’s Genocide of 1994, its agriculture-based economy was completely destroyed, forcing most of its inhabitants to live in a state of precariousness. Communities have risen from the ashes, embracing inclusive traditional and new leadership practices. This presentation will discuss how participatory visual methodologies combined with gender-based analysis are being used to enhance the sharing of tacit knowledge important to anchoring women’ and girls’ solutions in societal transformation of Rural Rwanda.

Global Leadership: A Case Study in Ukraine

Global Leadership: A Case Study in Ukraine

This case study offers insight on the challenges facing nations, such as Ukraine, that have emerged from an authoritarian history by addressing two leadership issues: (1) whether Western concepts of leadership are transferable and appropriate in the Ukraine, and (2) the related question of generational differences between younger and older Ukrainians. The research is based on over 1,000 questionnaires and 50 in-depth interviews administered in Ukraine. This panel will probe these findings in detail and offer conclusions based on both quantitative and qualitative analysis.

Leadership Perspectives is a series of live, interactive webinars which promotes a deeper understanding of leadership knowledge and practice. These webinars, free to ILA members, feature presenters from various sectors and disciplines who have cutting-edge research, theories, or resources.

You can always find the latest information on ILA’s webinars at: www.ila-net.org/webinars

Join us for one of our upcoming webinars:

Leading Through Change: Being the ‘I’ of the Storm
Sheila Ramsey & Barbara Schaetti
November 11, 2010, 12:00-1:00 PM EST
Register at: www.ila-net.org/webinars

Join this webinar and develop an understanding of Personal Leadership as one very distinct method for filling the gaps in the field of leadership development, and, as such, for helping leaders lead from the inside-out in the midst of change and the unfamiliar. Participants of this webinar will be entered to win one of four copies of their book, Personal Leadership, written with Gordon Watanabe.

Boundary Spanning Leadership
Chris Ernst & Donna Chrobot-Mason
January 29, 2011, 12:00-1:00 PM EST
Register at: www.ila-net.org/webinars

Join this webinar to learn more about Boundary Spanning Leadership, a new leadership model, forthcoming from McGraw-Hill Professional and the Center for Creative Leadership (November 2010). Participants will learn how to transform today’s limiting borders into tomorrow’s limitless frontiers to solve problems, create innovative solutions, and to transform your organization to thrive in a flat world. For additional information, please see www.spanboundaries.com. Participants of this webinar will be entered to win four copies of their book, Boundary Spanning Leadership.

Howard Gardner

HOWARD GARDNER is the John H. and Elisabeth A. Hobbs Professor of Cognition and Education at the Harvard Graduate School of Education. Among numerous honors, Gardner received a MacArthur Prize Fellowship in 1981. In 1990, he was the first American to receive the University of Louisville’s Grawemeyer Award in Education and in 2000 he received a Fellowship from the John S. Guggenheim Memorial Foundation. He has received honorary degrees from twenty-six colleges and universities, including institutions in Bulgaria, Chile, Ireland, Israel, and Italy. In 2004, was named an Honorary Professor at East China Normal University in Shanghai. In 2005, he was selected by Foreign Policy and Prospect magazines as one of 100 most influential public intellectuals in the world. He has been elected a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the American Philosophical Society, the National Academy of Education, and most recently (2007) the London-based Royal Society for the Encouragement of Arts, Manufactures, and Commerce. He serves on a number of boards, including the Spencer Foundation and New York’s Museum of Modern Art.

The author of over twenty books, translated into twenty-eight languages, and several hundred articles, Gardner is best known in educational circles for his theory of multiple intelligences, a critique of the notion that there exists but a single human intelligence that can be assessed by standard psychometric instruments. Building on his studies of intelligence, Gardner has also authored Leading Minds, Changing Minds, and Extraordinary Minds. Over a decade ago, in collaboration with psychologists Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi and William Damon, Gardner embarked on a study of GoodWork—work that is excellent in quality, socially responsible, and personally meaningful. The GoodWork Project (see goodworkproject.org) includes studies of outstanding leaders in several professions—among them journalism, law, science, medicine, theater, and philanthropy—as well as examination of exemplary institutions and organizations. More recently, Gardner and collaborators at Harvard Project Zero have embarked on applications of good work insights in secondary schools and colleges; investigations of conceptions of trust and trustworthiness in young people; and studies of ethical issues associated with the new digital media.

In this decade, Gardner has authored or co-authored several books. In 2001, Basic Books published Good Work: When Excellence and Ethics Meet. A more recent publication from the project is Making Good: How Young People Cope with Moral Dilemmas at Work. Other recent books by Gardner include The Disciplined Mind, The Development and Education of the Mind, Multiple Intelligences: New Horizons, and Five Minds for the Future. Gardner Under Fire (2006) contains a set of critiques to which Gardner has responded as well as an autobiography. Gardner’s newest co-authored book, Multiple Intelligences Around the World, was published in the summer of 2009.
What is NeuroLeadership?
NeuroLeadership is an emerging field of study founded in 2007. The field is about bringing neuroscientific knowledge into the areas of leadership development, management training, change management, consulting and coaching.

The NeuroLeadership movement is intended to help individuals and organizations of all types fulfill their potential through better understanding how the human brain functions at individual, team and systemic levels.

The four domains of NeuroLeadership
There are four domains of focus that are the central organizing principles for the NeuroLeadership field. NeuroLeadership explores the neuroscience aspect of what’s involved in:

- Decision making and problem solving
- Staying cool under pressure
- Collaborating with others
- Facilitating change

What is the NeuroLeadership Institute?
The NeuroLeadership Institute, an international research association, is a network of individuals and organizations seeking to get involved in the neuroscience of leadership field. The first NeuroLeadership Summit, held in May 2007, was the springboard for the formation of the NeuroLeadership Institute (NLI). The Institute’s purpose and mission were revised in consultation with members at the NeuroLeadership Summit in October 2009.

Some of the Institute’s activities include:

- NeuroLeadership Summit
- NeuroLeadership education:
  - Post Graduate Certificate in the Neuroscience of Leadership (Masters Phase I)
  - Masters in the Neuroscience of Leadership (Masters Phase II)
- The NeuroLeadership Journal
- Institute membership
- Local interest groups
- NeuroLeadership awards and scholarships

To find out more about the NeuroLeadership field or the NeuroLeadership Institute and its activities visit www.neuroleadership.org or contact Janelle Light at janellelight@neuroleadership.org or phone + (914) 502-0108 (U.S. Eastern)
