Welcome to 1440 and the fourth Women and Leadership conference! We hope this beautiful setting, alive as it is with ancient redwoods, will provide a nurturing context for building solutions, harmony, and the greater good. For thousands of years, indigenous people made these forests their home; in our hearts, we honor the people who have come before us and are grateful to be here.

This conference might be the most unusual one you will ever attend. This is not a conference where researchers speak only to researchers or where practitioners speak only to practitioners. It is a comprehensive gathering where people involved in all aspects of leadership — teachers, researchers, and coaches; business, appointed, and elected leaders — discuss leadership issues together. Presentations are grounded in the here and now, in the real world with all of its bumps and scrapes. Our perspective is a “half-full” one. We see things as they are, and we believe in solutions, even nontraditional ones, for getting to the way things should/might be. At this conference, we are brave. We are not afraid to talk about the interactive nature of love, mindfulness, personal harmony, spirituality, and the greater good. Because we address the hard questions, we name the elephant in the room. We acknowledge the structures constraining our leadership juxtaposed with our implicit and explicit mandate to lead.

The sequence of the words in our conference title, Building Solutions, Harmony and the Greater Good points to the proactive nature of this conference. Solutions is listed before harmony. We do not begin and end with a focus on our inner worlds. We start with solutions, ask how solutions promote harmony, and how solutions and harmony facilitate the greater good, “a widening pool of light” as Elizabeth Alexander called it in her poem, “Praise Song for the Day,” (written for Barack Obama’s 2009 Presidential Inauguration). At this conference, you will find a blend of outer, inner, collaborative, community, and global discussion. It is remarkable that so many contextual layers are discussed at one conference, yet there it is. These layers do not uncomfortably sit one beyond the other. Rather, personal layers, intrapersonal ones, and those addressing community and global issues are blended into a nourishing whole. We believe this conference provides something for everyone. You will find films, discussions, lectures, presentations, and opportunities for networking and solitary reflection. Please reach out to connect with others. During your time at 1440, we hope you’ll find the personal space and intellectual simulation to build solutions, create harmony, and advance the greater good in your own sphere of leadership.

OUR MISSION
Advancing leadership knowledge and practice for a better world.

OUR PURPOSE
The world has a deep and pressing need for leadership that inspires and enables us to face the challenges of a complex, diverse, and ever-changing world. ILA is committed to advancing leadership knowledge and practice for a better world. We do this by creating trusted spaces for leadership learning across boundaries and providing trusted leadership resources for our members, partners, and the public.

The ILA was created to bring together professionals with a keen interest in the study, practice, and development and teaching of leadership. Today, ILA is the largest global community dedicated to leadership theory and practice. Through conferences, webinars, publications, and other resources, ILA convenes and connects its members, provides professional development opportunities, and advances the field of leadership.

For twenty years the ILA has convened extraordinary talent across sectors, cultures, disciplines, and generations. Our members and partners are at the forefront of leadership thinking; inspiring new collaborations and innovative ideas for the greater good of individuals and communities worldwide.

This is who we are. This is what we do. With our members and partners, we can collectively make an even great impact. Come join us!

OUR VALUES
Our core values represent our deepest beliefs and highest aspirations regarding who we want to be as an organization and how we aspire to engage with the world. They are: Inclusion, Integrity, Interconnection, Interdisciplinary, International Perspective, and Impact.

STRATEGIC POSITIONING PLAN
ILA’s Strategic Positioning Plan (available online) is focused on four core areas to further develop ILA relationships, membership, programs, and resources to take the ILA through 2020.

• Relationship Development: Grow the field of leadership and the ILA
• Membership Development: Expand, engage, and diversify our membership
• Program Development: Assess, refine, and enhance our program portfolio
• Resource Development: Strengthen financial sustainability and organizational capacity
The Women and Leadership member community advances women in leadership by bringing together researchers, coaches, educators, practitioners and students interested in generating resources, disseminating research, and fostering the development of women leaders.

OUR PRIORITIES

• Enhance the status of women and leadership worldwide by providing a forum for networking, exchanging ideas, and mentoring
• Foster international collaborations and build global partnerships to nurture conversations about women and leadership
• Align our collective interests as change-makers to generate solutions for increasing equality in power and decision-making
• Collaborate with all stakeholders committed to addressing barriers and helping girls and young women become leaders
• Expand leadership education and development opportunities while acknowledging, respecting, and addressing the roles-within-roles of all women
• Facilitate a paradigm shift that advances women in leadership by modeling connectedness, inclusivity, and authenticity
• Contribute to the body of leadership scholarship and leadership development by advancing rigorous research, identifying best practices, and partnering with publishers

In this opening plenary panel, C-Suite leaders will share insights from their experiences leading a variety of organizations. They'll discuss how they build solutions, create harmony, and work toward the greater good, while touching on stakeholder relations, developing the next generation of women leaders, and working to benefit local and global communities.

Karen Clark Cole is the Chief Executive Officer (CEO) and Co-Founder of Blink, and is primarily focused on growth, strategic planning, and culture.

Cindy Pace is Vice President, Global Chief Diversity and Inclusion Officer at MetLife, where she leads the D&I strategy for 49,000 employees in nearly 40 countries.

Denise Raquel Dunning is the Founder and Executive Director of Rise Up, which advances health, education, and equity globally.

Parminder Vir OBE, is a Film Producer and the Former Chief Executive Officer of The Tony Elumelu Foundation.

Liza Howe-Walsh (Moderator) is Senior Lecturer in the Department of Organisation Studies at the University of Portsmouth in the UK.

Thank you The College of Saint Rose for being a Conference Partner and sponsoring this year’s opening plenary!

Leadership that inspires can move individuals, communities, organizations, and nations to build solutions from crises to peace. Caroline Kisia, Executive Director of Action Africa Help International, will offer leadership insights and lessons drawn from her career and current work with refugee populations in six fragile conflict and post-conflict countries in Africa. An avid hiker, Caroline will draw upon her experiences climbing Mount Kenya, Kilimanjaro, and the Imja Tse in the Himalayas and will share the self-nurturing and reflective practices she uses to maintain harmony in her life.

FEATURE FILMS

Sunday | 16 June | 20:00 - 21:30 | Redwood Auditorium
This Changes Everything

In this 2018 feature documentary, Director Tom Donahue and Executive Producer Geena Davis uncover “what is behind one of the most confounding dilemmas in the entertainment industry — the under-representation and misrepresentation of women. It takes an incisive look behind and in front of the camera, into the historical and empirical evidence, and systemic forces that foster gender discrimination and reinforce disparities in our culture.” Dr. Shelley Stamp, who appears in the film, will lead a discussion with conference attendees after the screening. Stamp is the award-winning author of Lois Weber in Early Hollywood; and Movie-Struck Girls Women and Motion Picture Culture after the Nickelodeon.

Monday | 17 June | 17:30 - 18:30 | Redwood Auditorium
Eva: A-7063

At 10, Eva Mozes Kor survived experiments by Nazi doctor Josef Mengele. At 50, she helped launch the biggest manhunt in history. Now at 85, after decades of pain and anger, she travels the world to promote what her life journey has taught: HOPE. HEALING. HUMANITY. Eva:A-7063, a documentary by Ted Greed, Mika Brown, and WFYI, tells her full unvarnished story for the first time, inspiring viewers around the world. A facilitated discussion hosted by Sarah Timmerman, from Utah State University, will follow.

Monday | 17 June | 20:00 - 21:30 | Redwood Auditorium
Algeria: Women at War

While this 1992 documentary focuses on the role women played in Algeria's war of independence from the French (1954-1962) and the subsequent 30 years living under single party rule, the questions the documentary raises about “the balancing act between women's and national liberation struggles” are timeless. In the film, Veteran fighters talk about their work in the revolution thirty years earlier and archival footage from the war years completes the picture. Following the screening, Parminder Vir OBE, the film’s producer, will lead a discussion with attendees.

Tuesday | 18 June | 20:00 - 21:30 | Redwood Auditorium
Miss Representation

“Written and directed by Jennifer Siebel Newsom, Miss Representation exposes how mainstream media and culture contribute to the under-representation of women in positions of power and influence in America. The film draws back a curtain to reveal a glaring reality we live with every day but fail to see — how the media's limited and often disparaging portrayals of women and girls makes it difficult for women to feel powerful and achieve leadership positions.” A facilitated discussion will follow.

SPECIAL ACTIVITIES

Unless otherwise noted, locations are listed in the information 1440 provided when you checked in for your overnight accommodations or when you picked up your commuter pass.

Sunday 16 June

15:00 – 16:30 & 17:00 – 18:30 | Guided Hike Meet at Redwood Patio
Enjoy being guided along 1440’s trails to the majestic Redwood Cathedral. During the hike, you will learn about the local ecosystem and native uses for plants, all while experiencing the magic of the redwoods. We'll expand our sensory awareness to drink in the sounds, smells, and colors of the forest, and drop into an inner peacefulness that comes from being in nature. Stretching, short meditations, and a few surprises along the way allow you to rejuvenate mind, body, and spirit.

17:00 – 18:15 | Qigong*

Monday 17 June

7:00 – 8:00 | Reflective Writing as a Leadership Practice | Outlook 201
Denise Thomson, DeWitt-Thomson, LLC
How can writing build solutions, harmony, and the greater good? What makes reflective writing a leadership practice? Gloria Steinem said, “The wisdom about our lives is already within us,” as she urged us to listen to ourselves and support one another. It follows then, that knowing oneself is a first step toward cultivating an authentic leadership style. Writing creates a mind-body-spirit connection that facilitates the inner knowing and outer congruency of an authentic leader — and we are all writers! Begin your day in a reflective writing session, explore the stories you tell yourself about yourself, and set an intention for the day. You will be prompted to quietly journal and given an opportunity to share your learnings in paired or group dialogues.

7:00 – 8:00 | Tai Chi/Qigong Flow*

13:00 – 13:45 | Outdoor Movement or Nature Walk*

ILA Women and Leadership Affinity Group

2019 AWARDS

FOR OUTSTANDING SCHOLARSHIP AND PRACTICE

Wednesday 19 June | 10:45 | Redwood Auditorium

Please join us in honoring our awardees at the closing plenary!

As a community focused on advancing women and leadership, the ILA Women and Leadership Affinity Group (WLAG) believes it is important to recognize and celebrate people who are contributing excellent work toward our goal. In 2014 WLAG began bestowing awards for outstanding scholarship and practice in the area of women and leadership at our annual networking luncheon at the ILA global conference, but as the biennial Women and Leadership conference has grown, it seemed fitting to move the awards presentation to this conference.

The WLAG received numerous impressive nominees in each category this year and we are pleased to present the 2019 awards for Outstanding Scholarship and Outstanding Practice in the area of women and leadership to the following leaders in the field!

The Outstanding Scholarship for Established Scholars award recognizes excellence in the scholarship of a seasoned scholar whose published work (theoretical, empirical, or applied) has advanced the understanding of women in leadership in a significant way.

WINNER: Karen Longman — Karen has been a senior academic leader at Azusa Pacific University since 2006. She has produced over 35 professional leadership publications during the past two decades and has presented 88 papers, workshops, and invited lectures from 2008 to the present including, most recently, three presentations at the 2019 Ethnographic and Qualitative Research Conference. Her reputation and expertise can be seen in her recent co-editor positions with “Perspectives on Women’s Higher Education Leadership from Around the World” in a Special Issue of Administrative Sciences, the seven-volume Women & Leadership: Research, Theory, and Practice book series produced by the International Leadership Association, and her co-editorship of Christian Higher Education: An International Journal of Research, Theory, and Practice, a peer-reviewed academic journal.

The Outstanding Scholarship for Emerging Scholars award recognizes excellence in the scholarship of a graduate student or early career scholar whose presentations, dissertation, and/or published work (theoretical, empirical, or applied) has the potential to advance or already has advanced the understanding of women in leadership in a significant way.

WINNER: Wendy Fox-Kirk — Wendy is currently an Assistant Professor at Weber State University. Wendy has already made remarkable contributions to the area of women and leadership with her research in the areas of women’s leadership identity and authentic leadership. Along with her solo work, Wendy has collaborated with senior scholars, developing a wide range of experiences and publications related to the examination of the importance of including contextual issues for women’s access to and experiences of leadership, and countering the “fix the women” discourse. She is a co-founder of the Utah Gender Interdisciplinary Research Network (UGIRN).
The Outstanding Practice With Local Impact award recognizes excellence in the practice of an individual whose advocacy, commitment, or actions in support of women in leadership has influenced individuals and audiences within their organization or community. The award recipient is someone who practices leadership — from outside or from within the academic arena — with a focus on women and leadership and has implemented a substantial change, policy, or event that has benefited women within a local sphere.

WINNER: JAN CARDWELL — Jan is the Vice President/Campus and Academic Director for the University of Phoenix - Detroit. In that role she works with the surrounding community through a number of organizations to support the development of local business women, entrepreneurs, and young people. This includes service as Chair Woman of the Board of Directors for Matrix Human Services and governance for the Southfield Lathrup Village Optimist Club and the National Entrepreneur Association. She has also served as a Research Fellow for the University of Phoenix Center for Leadership Studies and Education Research. Currently, her narrative studies Herstories of Entrepreneurship and Entrepreneurship: Profiles of Courageous Leadership are documenting the leadership challenges that women and business owners face.

The Outstanding Practice With Broad Impact award recognizes excellence in the practice of an individual whose advocacy, commitment, or actions in support of women in leadership has influenced individuals, audiences, organizations, or broad communities. The award recipient is someone who practices leadership — from outside or from within the academic arena — with a focus on women and leadership and has benefited women in a variety of areas and arenas beyond the recipient’s local sphere, resulting in broad impact.

WINNER: SUSAN MADSEN — Susan has accomplished a distinguished — and rare — record of blending top-rated research on women and leadership with amazing impact on women’s leadership and advancement around the world. In addition to founding ILA’s Women and Leadership Affinity Group and co-editing its seven-volume Women & Leadership: Research, Theory, and Practice book series, she has led the global movement to advance women and leadership. Susan is a key player in the field of global women’s leadership and is widely recognized for her ability to connect and broker partnerships. She is adept at taking research and creating real, tangible, and timely impacts. In addition to a host of speaking engagements in the U.S., Susan has given keynotes and/or presentations in numerous countries around the world, most recently at the UN and at the UK Parliament.

CONCURRENT SESSION PRESENTATION FORMATS

Guide to Session Formats

With so many choices we have created this guide, which draws attention to several helpful pieces of information beyond a session's title and description that can help you understand more about each session's focus, target audience, and format.

The ILA uses the following definitions to create shared expectations between presenters and attendees.

PANEL
An informed discussion and/or debate on a topic by panelists with contrasting or complementary points of view, moderated by a chairperson, with time reserved for audience participation, questions, and comments.

PRESENTATIONS
Two or more individually accepted papers/presentations grouped together by the program team into a session focused broadly on a theme or approach. The session chair introduces each presentation, keeps time, and facilitates the question and answer portion.

ROUNDTABLE (Developmental)
Individuals at various stages of their projects share their research with scholars who can support, challenge, and collaborate. Senior scholars chair and facilitate the sessions.

ROUNDTABLE (Interactive)
Small group discussion on a topic of common interest facilitated by an individual or team. The organizer frames the topic and then facilitates a discussion with participants at the table. During the session, when the bell rings, participants have the opportunity to move to another roundtable or remain where they are to continue the conversation.

SYMPOSIUM
Individual papers/presentations that were submitted together as a wholistic session exploring a common subject. Chairs frame the session, introduce presenters, keep time, and help move the conversation along. Commentators, if listed, moderate questions to create a rich discussion among presenters and attendees.

WORKSHOP
Rooted in audience participation and active learning, half or more of the time is spent on experiential learning and innovative, interactive audience participation focused on learning a new skill, methodology, or technique.

Session Stream

One indicator of a session's focus and target audience is its stream. All sessions have streams — corresponding to four of the major focus areas of the WLAG Asilomar Declaration and Call to Action on Women and Leadership and to the conference theme.

A session's stream is indicated on the first line of its listing in the program book after its presentation format.

Growing Up Girl: Raising Strong Female Leaders
Yolonda T. Sanders, Student, Organizational Leadership, Indiana Wesleyan University
Visit http://tinyurl.com/y2khg4t9 for Complete Description.

Despite the equal capabilities of male and female leadership, men continue to dominate leadership roles in society. When presented with opportunities to lead, women must abide by additional standards for others to view them as equally competent to their male counterparts. Though gender affects both internal and external perceptions of leadership, leadership development programs can help adolescent females self-identify as leaders and confidently seek leadership roles as they grow into adulthood.

Self-Efficacy and Political Ambition: Educational Interventions for Middle School Girls
Lindsay Allen, Doctoral Assistant, University of San Diego
Visit http://tinyurl.com/y3evtjna for Complete Description.

Studies show men are more likely than women to consider running for office, however parental encouragement, politicized educational experiences, and self-confidence are thought to increase political ambition among young women. This quantitative study explores the impact of a politicized educational intervention and its effects on self-efficacy in relation to political ambition as expressed by young girls age eleven to fourteen. Findings suggest political ambition can increase with targeted activities within the educational intervention.

Encouraging High School Females to Enroll in the Physical Sciences: A Reflection Twenty Years Later
Cheryl L. Burleigh, Research Fellow, Faculty, College of Doctoral Studies, University of Phoenix
Visit http://tinyurl.com/y3p8exgv for Complete Description.

The role of an educator is to encourage students to pursue academics to their full potential. When non-traditional role models in professions typically dominated by men are introduced to an urban high school setting, the effect on the female high school population produced an environment encouraging enrollment in the physical sciences and the pursuit of non-traditional careers. This narrative analysis revisits the original participants. Their shared stories give hope that positive interventions can have a lasting impact on the population served.

Encouraging Young Girls Towards STEM Careers: An Opportunity for Women Economic Empowerment
Hadeel Anabtawi, Founder, The Alchemist Lab; Teachers Trainer and Certified Life Coach
Visit http://tinyurl.com/y5fv3kjk for Complete Description.

Only 17 women have won a Nobel prize in physics, chemistry, or medicine since Marie Curie in 1903, compared to 657 men. Today, in many regions of the world, girls outscore boys in STEM studies at the age of 15, yet, their participation in STEM careers is very low. These gaps don't happen by chance. As STEM careers are one of the keys for future economic empowerment, we need to understand the drivers behind the situation and start to offer solutions early enough both at school and at home.

Overlooked Opportunities for Women Leaders to Impact Public Policy
April Townsend, Research Fellow, Utah Valley University
Visit http://tinyurl.com/y3amlxav for Complete Description.
Democracy is built on the core tenant of representation. Elected officials are chosen by the people who, in turn, rely on public employees for day-to-day oversight of rules and resources. Although women comprise 47.9% of the U.S. government workforce, men hold 70% of leadership positions, limiting opportunities for women to inform and influence public policy. This qualitative study explored the stories of nine women who successfully achieved administrative leadership and provides grounded recommendations for increasing representation in government bureaucracies.

Progress? What progress have we made in the United States for changing perceptions of leadership through the generations? Generations of women lag behind their male counterparts in the knowledge, skills, and behaviors of leadership. Focused reporting on inequities and lack of opportunities for women demonstrate an inadequate and slow change in societal norms. The perceptions of Generation Z on leadership, influences, and self-efficacy are less known. Can their perceptions and experiences support a significant movement towards equality?

Women & Leadership in Canada: Confidence and the Rise to the Top

Visit http://tinyurl.com/y2sbm5p4 for Complete Description.

This in-depth study of 18 female leaders across Canada shows the importance of confidence in women's rise to leadership. A C.A.R.E. leadership model was formed, representing the four main characteristics that led these 18 women to the top: courage, ambition, resilience and education. External support received by the participants from their parents, spouses, and mentors — combined with their own self-confidence — allowed these women to achieve their dreams of independence. This paper shares their personal stories and secrets of success.

Do you consider yourself a woman of privilege or a woman of circumstance? We set out to explore if or how self-identifiers influenced women’s leadership styles or mindsets for leadership. Privilege is defined for this research as having special advantages, benefits, or experiences. Circumstance is defined for this research as happenstance, attributes, or demographics. Our primary goal is to determine if privilege or circumstance has different meanings for different women.

Blending masculine and feminine types of behaviors in leadership has been found to positively impact the perception of women's leadership. Women's self-perceptions of gender-role identity on leadership effectiveness saw a positive significant correlation between masculine role identity and leadership effectiveness. The influence of gender stereotypes may contribute to incongruence in self-perceived identity and leadership effectiveness. Through a coaching program focused on women's leadership development, gender stereotype influences can be lessened for congruence between personal and professional identity and self-perceived leadership effectiveness.

This women of color panel explores how a spiritual epistemology can support women in redefining leadership beyond dominant paradigms that are based in control and certainty. We ask: How might a spiritual epistemology invite more of the whole of each of us to mutually lead? How can claiming our sacred dignity strengthen our capacity to lead from an inner-knowing? And, how can recognizing what we hold sacred allow women to become empowered in the process of advancing the collective good?

Amidst considerable achievements in gender equality, the world has also seen a recent resurgence of hyper-masculine leaders and rollbacks of women’s rights. What can we learn from the backlash to women's leadership and activism? Tracing women's movements over the last 50 years and recent patterns in the U.S. context, this workshop engages theory, systems mapping, and reflective practices to facilitate an exploration of the identities being forefronted in these movements and explore intersectional and gender-inclusive perspectives for SDG 5: Achieve gender equality and empower all women and girls.

  In a world full of unconscious bias training, leaking talent pipelines, and stubborn working practices, how do we ensure women are equipped with the leadership capability and motivation that will see them advance and thrive? With a literature review on leadership identity and gender hijacks, the presentation will explore whether women's leadership development needs to be different. The research reviews the efficacy of exhortations to women such as ‘building confidence’ and proposes a framework for designing high impact women's leadership development that does not assume a deficit.

  Increasing workloads, overwhelmed senses, and a desire for balance, are triggering warning signs that the current hierarchical, and traditionally male-dominated, structures are not working for women in higher education. This presentation will share dissertation research and results exploring the impact of coaching on women in academic leadership positions. As we contemplate the future of organizational life in academia, coaching women just might be a way forward by advancing women's leadership and resilience.

  The IT sector is plagued with multiple challenges including gender bias. Fortunately, there are women who have succeeded in breaking the glass ceiling. Proactive organizational executives recruit, develop, and retain leaders with a focus on talent and performance, with less attention to gender. This pilot study seeks to explore lived experiences of women leaders in IT.

  A model will be presented that captures the influences of organizational learning and culture on the interplay of individual and system occurrences at the nexus of gendered participation. Organizing is a gendered process that includes individual experiences of inequality and disadvantages. To fully interpret this reality, the explanation is focused on participation as the main bridge connecting the two. Suggestions for practice and scholarship are provided.

Even if Norway seems to be steadily placed among the top countries in the world on gender equality measures, there are remarkably few women at the top level of organizations. In the media sector, only 21 percent of leaders at the top are women. This paper focuses on how women leaders in the media sector perceive their career opportunities, and what makes them push away from top leadership positions. Data are collected via in-depth interviews as well as a questionnaire.

Leadership of Women Entrepreneurs in a High Growth Context – A Reflexive Approach

Using the framework of impression management (IM) we explore women's advancement to leadership positions. IM is also known as ‘Self Presentation’ and ‘Identity Management Theory.’ Through IM, individuals present themselves in a manner that they would like to be perceived. The challenge is how to make a useful impression that overcomes the roadblocks without losing authenticity. Linking IM to self-awareness provides an opportunity for workshop participants to consider how they may engage in IM and reflect on their unconscious bias.

   Benevolent sexism, the implicit twin of hostile sexism, is damaging because it is not recognized as sexism. Made up of protective paternalism, gender differentiation, and heterosexual intimacy, it is rooted in attitudes of power, superiority, and objectification. Self-efficacy is a factor in the development of a leader. Benevolent sexism is counterproductive to the determiners of self-efficacy. Women's leadership challenges are real, and they require support to sustain and cultivate resilience and agility for themselves and others. Making self-care and deliberate practice conscious and transparent supports and challenges women leaders and their communities and followers. This discussion will draw upon positive psychology, self-psychology, and leadership practice theories to consider how the strengths of women's leadership may benefit themselves and the world through conscious practices.

13. Pursuing Solutions Impeding the Advancement of Women in Leadership
Bonnie Matthews Ellis, Campus Director, University of Phoenix
Patricia Munson, Lead Faculty Area Chair, Academic Affairs, University of Phoenix
Visit http://tinyurl.com/yy3msoxj for Complete Description.
Women of all ethnic backgrounds encounter certain stereotypes and barriers in their attempt to advance to a leadership position. These stereotypes and barriers are more evident in the advancement to senior level or C-suite positions in organizations. Rather than advancement based on fit, women encounter certain stereotypes and barriers that affect personal leader identity and the ability to be included. Ultimately, this can impact an institution's effectiveness.

14. Shifting Patterns in Academia One Woman at a Time
Tawnya Leigh Lubbes, Assistant Professor of Education, College of Education, Eastern Oregon University
Shari Carpenter, Professor, College of Business, Eastern Oregon University
Carlos Peregrina, Graduate Assistant, College of Education and Business, Eastern Oregon University (Co-Author)
Visit http://tinyurl.com/y2pzmkll for Complete Description.
During this interactive roundtable, two female scholars will present research on gender differences in academia and review the fundamental issues that create inequalities in a promotion. Our discussion will focus on: where we are, where we can go, and how we engender it. The research intent is to add to the field of discussion by reviewing current literature as well as attaining new practices to address the unconscious bias and systemic inequality in higher education.

15. The Future of Leadership and Intellectual Capital

Join us to test the theory of Kaku (2012), who has advanced that the future will be shaped by intellectual capital. How does non-traditional leadership project the future of leadership after the replacement of human capital by robots? How does leadership relate to the future of wealth and intellectual capital?
16. Toward Inclusive Leadership: Developing Women and Faculty and Staff of Color in Higher Education

   Kathleen S. Grove, Director, Office for Women, Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis
   Gina Sanchez Gibau, Associate Vice Chancellor for Faculty Diversity and Inclusion, Academic Affairs, Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis (Co-Author)
   Shanna Marie Stuckey, Assistant Director for Research and Evaluation, Center for Urban and Multicultural Education, Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis (Co-Author)

   The underrepresentation of women and minoritized faculty and staff among the ranks of leadership is a perennial issue in higher education. During this roundtable, participants will engage leaders and researchers in a discussion of a program designed to develop leadership competencies among a cohort of women and people of color. Participants will leave with ideas of how to replicate such a program on their campuses and address the gender imbalance in leadership.

17. Women as Environmental Leaders

   Deborah R. Gallagher, Professor & Director of Professional Studies, Nicholas School of the Environment, Duke University
   Rebecca Vidra, Director, Duke Environmental Leadership Program, Duke University

   Climate change is exacerbating environmental disasters like floods and fires across the globe. The challenge of preventing further destruction falls on those called to be environmental leaders. Women lead movements and organizations to make progress in addressing global environmental challenges. Across campuses, young women promote sustainable behaviors. In this roundtable, we present a proposal for a course and book based on intergenerational conversations between future and current women environmental leaders, with a goal of understanding and celebrating how women lead.

18. Women in the Rural South: Emerging Leaders’ Voices

   Carolina Darbisi, Assistant Director & Public Service Faculty, J.W. Fanning Institute for Leadership Development, University of Georgia
   Maritza Soto Keen, Senior Public Service Associate, J.W. Fanning Institute for Leadership Development, University of Georgia (Co-Author)

   This roundtable will share the experiences of women who have participated in a women leadership academy in a southern heritage county in Georgia. Historically, agriculture and manufacturing have been economic drivers and male-dominated fields. Theories that have framed the academy’s curriculum are servant and adaptive leadership as well as the exploration of women voice(s). Roundtable participants will engage in a discussion on how the learnings and implications from this academy contribute to and further the research on women and leadership.

19. Women Leaders Over 70

   Lynne Elisabeth Devnew, Distinguished Research Fellow, School of Advanced Studies, University of Phoenix
   Louise Underdahl, Lead Faculty Area Chair, College of Doctoral Studies - Health Administration, University of Phoenix
   Elizabeth Johnston, Senior Research Chair and Faculty, School of Advanced Studies, University of Phoenix (Co-Author)

   Visit http://tinyurl.com/y3qsemme for Complete Description.

   Many women over 70 are starting second, third, or fourth careers and are making a difference. There is literature on women in politics, management, law, academia, and on corporate boards and suggestions that the old life stages literature is obsolete but virtually no research focused on women and leadership among elders. This proposed research will identify best practices and skill sets for advancing women in leadership.
Message from the Editor-in-Chief

You are invited to contribute a research article or a comprehensive review for publication after successful peer-review processing in Administrative Sciences (ISSN 2076-3387). Administrative Sciences is a multidisciplinary journal for the broad field of organization studies. It publishes research articles, reviews and other content, in open access format, released on the internet immediately after acceptance. As an open access journal, we believe that academic knowledge should be available to all, for free, so that others can build upon the knowledge shared. Open availability will encourage a stronger evidence-based management practice. The scientific community and the public have unlimited, free access to the content as soon as it is published. We would be pleased to welcome you as one of our authors. We also invite you to offer any proposals for Special Issue topics that you feel would be of interest.

Advancing leadership knowledge and practice for a better world

Guidance for individuals and organizations who champion the vision of the UN’s 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development.

Leaders present lessons learned, strategies, challenges, and successes in easy-to-read narratives highlighting their diverse experiences with context, culture, power, gender and sustainability.

The International Leadership Association’s Building Leadership Bridges series captures the best contemporary thinking about leadership and leadership practice from thought-provoking authors and researchers, experienced educators, game-changing coaches and development professionals, and successful business executives and public leaders. In keeping with ILA’s mission, the series builds connections between people’s leadership experiences around the globe to advance leadership knowledge and practice for a better world.

African American, White, and Asian Women Transcending Leadership Barriers: Learning From Lives
Chair: Kathryn Goldman Schuyler, Founder, Coherent Change
Discussant: Cheryl Getz, Associate Professor, School of Leadership and Education Sciences, University of San Diego
Visit http://tinyurl.com/yxan642k for Session Details.

This session brings together three women from three different cultural worlds exploring the societal divisions, barriers, personal obstacles as well as achievements of women within their own cultural groups. Through systematic qualitative research that investigated questions coming from their own lived experiences, the authors examined the relationship between women and their identities (as leaders, as members of ethnic groups, and as working or stay-at-home mothers.) Being action-oriented researchers, they will share implications of their studies for creating inclusive workplaces.

The African American Woman’s Leadership Experience in Corporate America: The Impact of Biculturalism
Dominique Sperling, School Liaison Officer, Hawai’i State Department of Education
Visit http://tinyurl.com/y4ft7c5p for Complete Description.

By necessity, African Americans are often bicultural, moving back and forth between their African American ethnic roots and their White Caucasian professional associations. My qualitative study of eight African American women leaders let me explore how they experienced what it means to be bicultural in the North American corporate environment.

From Career Woman to Stay-at-Home Mother and Back Again: Understanding the Choices Mothers Make
Adrienne Partridge, Leadership & Career Coach, adriennepartridge.com

This qualitative research study examined how 10 educated mothers experienced the decision of leaving their careers, stay-at-home motherhood, and the professional reentry process after a period of eight or more years of filling the traditional gender roles of wife and stay-at-home mother. Organizational structure constraints, traditional upbringings, and the role of egalitarian versus traditional marital dynamics influenced these women's experiences of career exit and career reentry.

The Experiences of Asian Immigrant Women: Journeys Into Corporate Leadership
Yon Na, Principal, yonnaphd.com

This study sheds light on the experiences of eight Asian immigrant women who, despite barriers, achieved levels of success in multi-billion-dollar corporate settings. The participants immigrated to the U.S. during their adolescent years and are now leaders in corporate environments. Their stories provide insight into what it's like to be an Asian immigrant in U.S. society and the approach required to artfully navigate the corporate landscape.

This session shares multidisciplinary and cross-cultural research-based perspectives on resilience, especially as it applies to women leaders. By exploring perspectives from diverse fields such as psychology, health/wellness, counseling, leadership, education, religious studies, and sociology, participants will see common threads, useful distinctions, and unique cultural perspectives on resilience that can help them enhance their own resilience. The workshop format allows for reflective discussions on participants' own experiences and challenges with resilience as well as introductions to activities that enhance resilience.

A West Texas youth leadership program that develops youth through experiential learning and mentorship partnered with an all-girls middle school to facilitate a leadership camp for incoming eighth graders. The camp was crafted as a solution to meet the interpersonal and intrapersonal needs of the girls and their lack of skills to handle the difficulties faced by adolescents. This session will guide participants through lessons learned to meet the emotional needs of adolescent girls while simultaneously developing them as leaders.

Explore how our dominant identities, reliance on hegemonic theories/models, and familiar teaching practices might push marginalized students into “the Sunken Place” (Peele, 2017) — a place where students are forced into submission and silence, into separating their social identities from their leader identity (Komives, et.al, 2015). This workshop will employ adaptive leadership (Heifetz et al., 2009) and culturally relevant leadership learning (Guthrie, Jones & Östeen, 2017) to reflect on current practices and contemplate strategies to drop the metaphorical teaspoon.

See you in Redwood Auditorium at 10:30 for the closing plenary and refreshments to enjoy before your journey home!
